Zooming IN...on the experience

High School truly is a unique experience. Upon entering high school, students never believe the next four years will fly by. They soon realize they were wrong. In four short years at Batesville High School, students create millions of memories. When looking back on their high school experience, students will be able to Zoom In on these wonderful memories.

In years to come, students and staff will be able to Zoom In, on memories created in classrooms. Students will remember all of the inside jokes made with friends during classes, just as well as they will remember Charlie Raab's uncanny way of making Chemistry understandable. Furthermore, students will be able to Zoom In on the knowledge they gained at BHS. Students have created important life skills in classes such as business and Project Lead the Way.

Students will be able to Zoom In on the experience gained in the variety of clubs at BHS. KSLA participants created important leadership skills. FFA gave students knowledge that they will find usefull later on in life. In Drama Club, students formed friendship they will hold dear for the rest of their lives.

During games, matches, and meets, students created memories that they will Zoom In on as they get older. Students will always remember making it to Semi-State in basketball, or breaking countless school records. The hard work they put in for their teams will always stand to show their dedication and will to accomplish goals.

At events like semi and prom, students created memories with friends that they will forever hold in their hearts. They will be able to Zoom In on the memory of finally getting the courage to ask that special someone to dance or creating new and unique dance moves. Graduation will forever be a special moment as the seniors recieve their diplomas and move on to the real-world.

High School is a special time for young adults. Memories are made each day at BHS. No matter how fast the years fly by, students will always be

Zooming In on unique memories made in high school.

With a school full of spectacular students and events, it's time to ZOOM IN on some of these cherished times and memories. From getting pumped at sporting events to annoying teachers with games, students are creating memories and lifelong bonds in and out of school. Both nervous freshmen walking in on their first day and seniors ready to power through their last year ZOOM IN on the fact that each year at Batesville High School is packed with excitement.

Minute of Embarrassment

Students laugh hysterically as the participants of the 2010 Homecoming pep-rally shake their butts. The contestants try frantically to get ping-pong balls out of Kleenex boxes strapped to their lower backs. Sophomore Anna Zins cartwheels across the gym in a desperate attempt to shake out all of the ping-pong balls, while T.C. Eckstein does handstands. Senior Emily Kelley follows Eckstein's lead, while Charlie Raab does a move of his own. Other contestants laugh out of embarrassment as they do everything possible to shake out

Homecoming... When!

Junior and senior girls argue and laugh over ideas of t-shirts and football plays while the boys work on their booty shaking and cartwheels for the biggest spirit week of the school year. When news gets out that there will be no powder puff football game, not only does school morale plummet, but students get angry.

For years homecoming week has been a time of freshmen fun, a time for senior and junior girls to bond within their class, and most importantly it is a time when the entire school is filled with pride for the blue and white. Sadly, this year the long-standing traditions were forced to change. Powder puff was taken away and freshmen fun week was no more.

Rumors went around the school about who made the decision to cut powder puff out of the plans. The Student Council advisor Darrick Cox Hazelwood, Brooke Bedel, Jessica decided to not have powder puff with their choice and said, "Powder Hazelwood and Bedel felt they did not they were put in a situation where puff due to time restraints. Bedel felt the game. Bedel said, "You should everything together early."

"You should fight for powder puff, just get everything together early."

The confirmed that officers Sean Wallpe, and Grant Meyers this year. Cox was satisfied puff won't be back." Both really have a choice and that they had to cancel powder there was no time to organize fight for powder puff, just get

The homecoming game had than normal, and, when walking down the halls, no one would have guessed it was homecoming week. Senior Katie Thomas said, "I didn't go to the game because I forgot it was even homecoming." Along with Thomas, many students were infuriated about having no powder puff.

Everyone looks forward to playing and watching powder puff, even freshmen. As a result of canceling the game there was talk of boycotting school lunch, making homemade powder puff t-shirts and walking out of class to play. None of these ideas were completed, though, because, as Junior Austin Meyer said, "People were too worried about getting in trouble and were already discouraged that it wouldn't help." Meyer personally didn't see the risk because he felt the administration had already taken student rights and privileges away anyways.

Even Homecoming Princess Kendall Jordan sarcastically said that winning homecoming for the second time "was like the joy of eating a Big Mac at McDonald's." Even the dance was cut short and lasted only an hour after the game. Hopefully next year will bring back our old traditions and the school morale that keeps the bulldog spirit alive.

Junior Maurissa Amrhein shrieks as Jacob Black appears on the screen of Eclipse. She has long been a fan of the Twilight saga and finds Jacob Black, played by Taylor Lautner, "hot!" Junior Lauren Enneking on the other hand, feels Harry Potter is dominant over the Twilight Saga.

The discussion of Harry Potter versus Twilight has been an on-going and passionate battle. To get to the bottom of this, two of BHS's most avid fans explained why their favorite is superior. The fans used a made-up scenario--Harry Potter and Edward Cullen in a fight to the death--as an example to prove their points.

Enneking feels Harry Potter would beat Edward Cullen and said, "Either Harry would pull out a mandrake and kill him, or he would call him a traitor because he was Cedric Diggory first, which would result in Edward crying or going completely vampire [crazy]!" Amrhein said, "Edward Cullen would probably win because he is super-fast and would attack before Harry could cast a spell by breaking his neck and drinking his blood."

The Harry Potter books appeal to Enneking because, as she stated, she was a "weird kid." She felt by default she had to like anything and everything that could be considered odd or nerdy. She is also impressed with how J.K. Rowling created an entirely new world and said that this and various other reasons make Harry Potter better than Twilight. Amrhein is attracted to Twilight because she is a hopeless romantic. She said that Edward is "just dreamy," which is why she considers the Twilight Saga supreme.

Teachers are becoming addicted as well. Angie Parmer read the entire Twilight Saga over Winter Break in just one week. While walking with Megan Spreckelson and Molly Waechter, Parmer said the "passion really comes out in the fourth book" when the reader discovers how much Edward held back. While Parmer raved about Twilight, Spreckelson mocked her and said, "I want to suck your blood."

There is no doubt about it; students and staff have been bitten by the reading bug.

4 WAYS TO USE a Silly Band

Love 'em or hate 'em, Silly Bandz are everywhere, and people have found many uses for these colorful rubber shapes. They come in hundreds of colors and shapes, from animals to musical instruments to Justin Bieber (really). They are made of "100% medical grade silicone," according to the official Silly Bandz website, and are surprisingly versatile. Here are some of the most common uses:

1. Jewelry

This is by far the most common use for Silly Bandz. Many students, such as sophomore Jessie Mittleman, have wads of them on their wrists. Others wear them on their ankles, and companies have begun releasing Silly Band rings, too. Silly Band Necklaces are already on sale, and it may not be long before companies produce Silly Band earrings as well. Keep an eye out for Silly Band Chain Mail, coming soon to stores everywhere.

2. Trading Cards

They aren't exactly cards, but students trade them back and forth like they are Pokemon cards. Mittleman thinks certain Silly Bandz are so in demand "because they come in many different shapes and colors, and it's hard not to find one you like." Crume said, "They're like Beanie Babies. They're collectible."

4. BHS Eric Hudepohl, Courtney McCray, and Briana Vanderpohl model dozens of vibrant silly bands. They would be successful in a silly band trade; perhaps they would come away with several rare phoenix bands. (Photo By: Madeline Stevens)

3. Weapons

Sophomore Chris Crume uses Silly Bandz "first and foremost as a weapon." This is the second-most common use, and the most popular among male students. The most prevalent weapons of mass silliness are slingshots, either simple ones using only rubber bands and a thumb, or more complex structures. Sophomore Nick Wanamaker said, "I know someone who took two pencils and a Silly Band and made a slingshot. When he shot a pencil really far, we'd all shout, 'GOAL!'"

4. Anything

There are probably hundreds of ways to use Silly Bandz, from the expected to the absolutely ridiculous. They can replace the rubber bands in your braces, make great gifts, or be dental floss, hair ties, toys, or, as Crume put it, "elegant evening wear." Love them, hate them, think they're a trend that will soon disappear, or think they're here to stay, Silly Bandz have become undeniably popular. Even if they're just a fad, their flash in the pan is burning brightly at Batesville High School.

THINK YOU CAN Dance?

As the red, shivering students walk in from the cold, the dance floor fills. Strobe lights flash as the music begins. The crowd jumps up and down, and students sing at the tops of their lungs. The 2010 semi-formal dance has officially begun.

The dance was held at the old Batesville Middle School gym, a new location for the student council-sponsored event. Most of the girls showed up to the dance in sparkling dresses, while the guys showed up in shirts and ties. By the end of the night, several of the guys' ties were not around their necks, but around their foreheads.

The DJs got the crowd going with great music. Students danced-off to several songs. Carlton Totten, a visitor at competition, and sophomore, joined thought I could do enough, others beney McCray, another pushed into the wasn't really ready. Herbert said the dance-off. Darrick Cox, Student Council adviser, said that over 200 people showed up for the event. Sean Hazelwood, a senior and the student council president, said that the dance was successful. "We made a lot of money for student council. Senior Jon Lanning described the dance as "crazy." Lanning said, "People were just dancing, not having any cares or worries. They were just having fun." Another senior, Brooke Bedel, said that her favorite part of the dance was "everyone getting together and goofing around." Cox said that his favorite part of helping with the dance is "providing students with a safe way to have fun." It seems like this semi-formal was more than semi-successful. Maybe by next year, everyone will be ready for a dance-off.

Softball and Sliming

As the final bell rang throughout the hallways, students made their way out to the softball diamond for the big "Juniors vs. the Staff" softball game. For the teachers, it was a chance to continue their domination. The students viewed the game as a chance for revenge after the "Staff vs. Students" basketball game. Regardless, the afternoon was jam-packed with fun activities to celebrate the end of the school year.

As the students walked out to the field, two teams were warming up for the battle. After what seemed like forever, the game finally began. Mr. Raab went up to bat. The pitch sailed through the air, and Mr. Raab swung. There was a loud crack as the ball hit the bat. Everyone turned to see the ball sailing over the fence. It was a home-run! The game continued with the same amount of excitement. At the end of the hard-fought game, the students came out victorious. The final score was 8-7.

Junior Grant Meyer, student coach and player, said the score reflected the teams' skills. He said, "We had a good line-up, and our coaching staff wouldn't get out-coached." His favorite part about the game was beating the teachers. His hope is that they will create a "dynasty" in the years to come. Ms. Dickman knew the juniors would enjoy their victory. She said, "They will really enjoy their victory, and they will make sure that we know how much they enjoyed beating us!"

Following the game, the students were directed to the outfield to watch the Key Club sliming. Starting two weeks prior to the event, Key Club asked students to put money in for the teacher they wanted to see slimed. The three teachers with the most money were to get slimed. The winning teachers were Taira Lynch, T.C. Eckstein, and Charlie Raab. At the actual sliming, Mr. Lemon auctioned off the chance to actually pour the slime on the teachers. Sydney Graybender paid to slime Lynch, Austin Glaub slimed Eckstein, and Maurissa Amhrien poured the bucket of green slime on Raab. It was quite difficult to find the popular teacher when it was his turn to be slimed. Raab attempted to blend into the crowd. At the end of the day, 125 dollars was made. All of the proceeds were donated to the March of Dimes to help fund research of birth defects.

To finish the day, the National Honor Society funded a water balloon fight. This turned out to be the perfect way to end the scorching hot day. Over 1,000 water balloons were filled in preparation for the event. At the end of the fight, students came back drenched in water.

The afternoon turned out to be a fun way to end the school year. Dickman enjoyed the afternoon. She said, "I love playing softball, and I feel that it is important to let the student body know that teachers want to create memories with their students. We as teachers want high school to be memorable both inside and outside the classroom."

- 3. Don't let the station wagon get below a quarter-tank.

"Leave my stuff alone!"

"Give it back!"

This may sound like a typical sibling argument at home. However, this same sibling bickering has happened thousands of times in the halls of BHS.

What happens when you jam siblings into the same school? In most cases things go smoothly because of different schedules and grade levels, but some students don't have that luxury. Freshman Ben Westerfeldt, a triplet, admits, "It's alright, it just gets kind of annoying." Westerfeldt has to share the freshman hallway with sisters Michaela and Virginia Westerfeldt.

Siblings also bond over shared interests. For instance, junior David Lehfeltdt and his sister, sophomore Hannah Lehfeltdt, have both played soccer since they were young. In other situations, friendly advice can cause anger, and siblings butt heads at school.

For some, the worst part about having a sibling at school is the feeling of being watched.

"It's like my parent's eyes are at school. She tells on me for stuff," David Lehfeltdt said.

Another downside to having a sibling in school is the possibility for arguments. No matter where you put siblings, they will almost always end up fighting. This is especially true in the school environment, where many siblings find themselves in a competition of who can get the best grades. This competition is usually anything but friendly. This is especially true with Senior Scott Gryspeerdt and Junior Stacey Gryspeerdt.

"We always try to make it sound like our class has it the hardest," Scott said.

This competition often gets heated and can cause some conflict. The Gryspeerdts share some similarities, however. Both Scott and Stacey have excelled in cross country through their high school career.

Through this hail of hatred, there is a light at the end of the tunnel. Most school-sharing siblings will agree that there is some good that comes from having a sibling at school.

"If I'm sick, she can get my homework," said junior Megan Forbeck, referring to sister Kelsie Forbeck, a freshman. Stacey also admits that it is nice because, "If you need something, you always have someone to bum money from."

A sibling at school has positive and negative consequences, but at the end of the day, it's nice for students to know an extra person is there to have their back.

HORSIN' AROUND

In the fresh air under blue skies best friends Ryan Thornsberry, junior, Rae Strobel, sophomore, and Dani Strobel, freshman, are seen riding their horse companions around the Strobel's arena. Each has her own reasons for riding. Thornsberry said horse riding is, "liberating" and both Strobel sisters said it is "freeing." Thornsberry and Rae Strobel both think about competing, but sadly say that they have no time. Dani Strobel however says she rides horses just for fun, and that her sister is more into the sport. According to Rae's sister Dani, Rae is serious enough about horse riding that she has thought about going to college for it as a possible major or minor.

Taking care of the horses is a task that comes along with the joy of riding. Although it is hard work, Rae does not seem burdened by it. Thornsberry even takes pleasure in grooming her horse, Copper. Every day the horses need to be fed both picked. Horse owners must also and clean the saddles and bridles. family members at the Strobel's horses every day. After she buys a new "they are dandy falls," and she finds joy and strength in getting back up. Rae said three years ago she was thrown off "seven feet in the air" which led to tailbone injuries, but just like her good friend Thornsberry, she, too, said she, "got right back on."

Obviously the girls aren't scared of taking risks. They like to try and perform tricks just for fun around the arena. They have tried jumping over ground poles, riding backwards, saddling and unsaddling the horse, and, as Thornsberry said, "we try to do stupid, random stunts." Rae Strobel, Dani Strobel, Thornsberry, and sophomore Holly Laker judge horses with FFA. At a state contest their team placed 3rd. At these contests they must judge show horses and riding. Once they have chosen their placings they are required to give oral reasons as to why they placed each individual according to body composition and response to the rider's cues.

When the day is done the girls either head off to the pool for a cool dip, or, if too exhausted, off to bed only to ride again the next day and every day after.

You finish up the last touches of your apparel for the night, ask your dad if you can borrow the car, and grab all the money you can get. You think to yourself, "I can't wait for this night to start."

Many students look forward to prom night so they can stay out later than usual, hang with friends, and just have a good time. Senior Chris Giesting said, "Prom night gives us something to do on a weekend in boring Batesville." Many students were looking forward to the crowning of king, queen, prince, and princess. The king turned out to be Chris Giesting, and his queen turned out to be Carley Paul. The prince and princess were juniors Drew Coleman and Regan Roberts.

Adults look forward to the event that is prom, as well. Senior Class Sponsor Megan Spreckelson has been sponsoring prom for nine years now and said, "I will keep sponsoring prom as long as I can. Spreckelson, Angie Parmer, other hardworking student for weeks over prom decorating committee tried their hardest. Many attendees commented this year.

Prom preparations involve more than just decorations. Prom is a very expensive night for many, but some try and make it more cost-efficient. One senior who successfully cut the expense of prom was Paul. Paul borrowed her dress from a friend, which took a big bill down to nearly nothing. Other groups enjoyed home-cooked meals at the home of a friend, another inventive, fun way for students to prepare for prom.

Expensive is only one word out of many to describe prom night. Giesting said, "Prom was classy. Everyone wears a tux or their best suit, and girls go out and spend obscene amounts of money on hair and dresses. Guys call friends for nice cars to take their girl in, and everyone tries hard to be classy." Roberts said, "Prom was perfect."

At the end of after-prom, everyone was tired and ready to go home and sleep. Feet were sore and voices were hoarse, but everyone had a great time.

Night Owls

Lights flash, foot-steps fly by, screams fill the crisp night air, filling the depths of the hollow night with skepticism. Why all the commotion? Wait, it's just an epic battle of will and stealth as Batesville High Schoolers try to beat each other in flashlight tag. It's a testimony to the willpower of each individual involved.

The flashlight tag games began "a couple of years ago" as Graham Hawley stated and have continued ever since. "We started playing just to have fun," said Hawley.

According to Brittany Vogelsang, however, "I did not personally start the games of flashlight tag. It has been a neighborhood tradition since I was in fifth grade, maybe even a little before that."

According to Hawley there are between 6 and 23 people who play on any given night. "We usually start playing every year around spring break time. We usually play for two hours, from nine to eleven and sometimes 'til midnight."

The rules are very simple for those who play. The object of the game is to shine the beam of light onto the other players who are playing. One person is "IT" and it is their job to go around and tag all of the people who are hiding. To tag the other players, one must shine the light on another player and shout they are "it."

Ever since these games have started, they have created memories for many. Vogelsang said, "I love the games. They're so much fun, a good place to meet new friends, and so many inside jokes get created at them. It is fun because there are always new people joining the games. The rush of suspense when you're running from the person who is 'it' is always a bonus."

Another player in the group, Lindsay Ward stated, "You get to be with your friends and lots of memories have been made. I have scars from these games!"

The flashlight tag group has created a facebook page, which, according to Vogelsang, has made it easier to get the word out.

As for Vogelsang, who will be graduating this year, "I think it is very possible I will continue playing after I graduate."

These flashlight tag games have brought about several lasting memories for all the players. The group tends to play in Vogelsang's neighborhood and around her house on many weekends. So when you see flashing lights and hear commotion going on, it's probably just memories being made.

CONCLUDING the JOURNEY

On Saturday June 4, 144 seniors took the procession walk to the stage to receive their diplomas. The Batesville High School gym was a full house as parents, relatives, and friends watched their graduating senior take a plunge into the new part of their life.

The ceremony began at 11:00 a.m., with many spectators filing in as early as 10:00 a.m. Senior Alex Dunbar said, "The ceremony was good because it felt long enough to be official and informative, while it was also not too lengthy and dragged-on. Since I've been in the band all of high school I've witnessed graduation for the past four years, so it pretty well went as expected. The only complaint, and I'm sure a lot of other people have said this, is that it was really hot in that gymnasium, especially for the graduates."

Although the heat seemed to be a re-occurring complaint amongst the graduates, emotions still ran high, especially for one graduate, Madi Dreyer.

"The ceremony in the gym was very hot, but it was definitely not as long as I expected it to be. It was also very exciting to be with everyone for the last time before we graduated."

Following statements by Principal Sherri Preston, School Board President Chris Lowery, and the class of 1961, Jane Doll and Tyler Alley took the stage for their Salutatorian and Valedictorian speeches. Up first was salutatorian, Jane Doll.

According to Connor Hagan, "Jane's speech was very fitting to the occasion. I thought it wrapped up our school years in a very nice way."

Alley followed Doll's speech with one of his own. Alley's speech focused primarily on a runner and his struggles in a race, and concluded with a reference to The Lord of the Ring's character, Frodo Baggins.

According to senior James Call, "If there was a 'like' button to press for his Frodo Baggins quote, I would have jumped on it in a heartbeat; that made my day!"

Dreyer said, "Tyler's speech was inspirational and helped everyone to realize never to give up as we move on to the next obstacles we face in our lives."

After the conclusion of the speeches, it was time for the moment seniors waited for since they began their high school journey four years ago. It was time to receive their diplomas. This brought about strong emotions for all of the seniors who walked across the stage to shake Superintendent Dr. Jim Roberts's hand and receive their diploma.

Dunbar said, "It felt fantastic receiving my diploma. As soon as I grabbed it, I felt as if I could see all the memories of my school career before my eyes. To finally finish all that work after years and years of hard work and determination, just felt great...Now for college!"

The emotions didn't change for Hagan or Dreyer.

"It felt awesome to receive my diploma and know that I was finally done with high school," said Hagan.

"It was very exciting to receive my diploma because it was finally the moment when I would move on to a new learning experience in my life," said Dreyer.

Now that the graduation ceremony was coming to an end, the idea that high school is over was becoming a reality. Emotions ran high as the graduates stood holding their diplomas, reflecting on the times that they had while at BHS.

Call said, "Batesville High School has consumed a great deal of time, energy, sleep, blood (well, not that much blood I guess,) sweat, and tears, and in return, I've received great friendships, all sorts of knowledge (some of which was even useful,) and a ton of growth. You bet I'll miss it and all the wonderful people who made it such an awesome experience!"

The graduation ceremony ended with the traditional cap flip and procession. The seniors' high school careers have come to a close, but as for the underclassmen, the beat goes on.

Ready. Set. Go!

Sitting in the stands, the only thing anyone can hear is the roar of the drag racers' engines. Everyone is tense and excited, rooting for their driver. The drivers are in their seats, ready to go. The gun fires, and the drivers are off!

For Melissa Robbins, this is an ordinary event. She is one of the few girls that competes in drag races across the state. Melissa started racing when she was six years old. Her dad introduced her to it with small go-carts and four-wheelers. Her dad has been racing for twenty years. Friend and fellow senior, Megan Suding, said, "It's been a tradition for her family." Melissa races in at least one race a month in the spring and summer. The only exception is in the month of August, when she competes in a full weekend of drag racing and a few other races throughout the month. According to Suding, it is interesting to see the faces that people make when they learn that Melissa drag races. Suding said, "They don't believe it. They are stunned." They are even more stunned to learn that she has actually beaten guys who have been racing longer than she has. This year she ended up in second place out of 43 guys. Fellow racer and sophomore Conner Price said, "It's rare to see girl racers, and second is a really good placement."

Melissa's favorite part about racing is the thrill. She said she loves the the "adrenaline rush from going out onto the track." After high school, Melissa intends to continue racing. She even intends to introduce her future kids to the sport and hopefully continue the family tradition.

A young man with dark hair and a serious expression is looking directly at the camera. He has a small, light-colored bandage on his right nose. He is wearing a dark jacket over a light-colored shirt. He is holding a knife in his right hand and a fork in his left hand. In front of him is a white plate containing several screws. The background is a blurred indoor setting with large windows and a brick wall.

Go Hard, Play Harder, Get to the Money

Story by: Trevor Tucker

"Hop up out the bed, take a look in the mirror, and say, 'Wassup?'" Do like 200 pushups, shower, get dressed, walk out the door and get to the money." This is how senior Randy Gibbs starts every morning.

Gibbs is part of a close group of friends that includes seniors Blake Cobb, Mylz Hankins, Stetson Leach, Pat Yeager, Kenny Lecher and Dylan Inman.

"Dylan makes him madder than anything else in the world," said Leach. Each day Gibbs tries to hunt, lift weights, have some fun, hit on girls and play football.

"Randy has been an important part of our football team...our team will miss him next year," said football coach Eric Heppner.

"I always felt safe running my routes knowing that Brady (varsity quarterback) was safe with Randy blocking," said All-State wide receiver Wes Goldsmith. What keeps Gibbs going through the day is his motto-- "go hard, play harder, and get to the money," an ambitious quote for such a young guy.

"Randy is younger than everybody by almost a year," says Hankins. While Gibbs is younger than anyone else in the grade, his bench press could compete with any BHS student. It exceeds 300 lbs. Gibbs may be so strong because of his odd diet, which includes Cheez-Its mixed with hot pretzels and cheese puffs on peanut butter sandwiches.

Another surprising fact about Gibbs is his neatness. "He's completely O.C.D. organized," said Leach. Gibbs may eat weird foods and have O.C.D.-like tendencies, but considering his future plans are "attend college and getting to the money," who can blame this behavior?

BREAKING THE ICE

In a town dominated by football, and with the nearest ice in the freezer, hockey may not seem like the most convenient sport to play, but this never stopped senior Trevor Tucker. Ever since the age of seven, Tucker has been skating through various bone-crushing leagues, always having to drive at least an hour or more for games and practice.

Tucker's friend, junior John Bruns, said, "Trevor shows a lot of dedication by driving all the way to Kentucky for practices, and doing a lot of work in the off-season. It really shows his determination."

What would inspire a high school student to make such a sacrifice? Tucker said, "The Mighty Ducks trilogy. I wanted to be just like Charlie Conway."

Ever since he saw "The Mighty Ducks," Tucker has been playing in leagues based mostly out of Northern Kentucky. When asked if his family was always supportive in his hockey career, Tucker responded, "Yeah. My mom was actually the one who encouraged me to play, and my brothers always thought it was pretty cool."

Throughout his high school career, Tucker played on two different teams before finding a home with the Northern Kentucky Norsemen for his junior and senior year. Tucker excelled with the Norsemen where, Bruns said, "His game-turning goals helped his team to victory." As a Norseman, Tucker also played in many rough and tough games and tournaments that required even longer drives to Cleveland or Chicago.

Tucker is a testament to the idea that you should do what makes you happy, not what is normal for your town. Everyone should try stepping out of their comfort zone to try something new, because, like Tucker shows, there is something out there for everyone.

Songbird of Our School

Story by: Justin Edwards

Excitement fills a dimly-lit venue as her band is about to take stage. Tori Roper is among two of the brave girls who worked the stage at 2011's Battle of the Bands. Little did she know this would be her favorite on-stage memory to date.

Up until this year, Tori Roper described herself as "that weird girl in the hallways who was always singing and carrying a guitar." According to freshman John Krieger, (I like Tori) "because she has cool hair." Roper is a multi-instrumentalist and an avid music lover. She took piano lessons, but quit because she hated them. In 8th grade she relearned the instrument and has been playing ever since. Junior year Roper taught herself guitar, and for Christmas last year she received a ukulele, which she can be seen playing in one of her original songs currently streaming on YouTube. She joined the choir in 4th grade and has been singing ever since. She was a Batesville Singer from freshman to junior year, but quit because of scheduling issues. Roper loves the school's music programs because "they're very important, and I would be sad if they got taken away".

When she isn't playing music, she spends her time listening to music. Girl-fronted bands like Paramore and VersaEmerge top her list of favorite artists. Although she loves performing the music of punky girl bands, she doesn't know if her voice would hold up during shows. Her goals for after high school include attending Indiana University and finding people who love music as much as she does and are dedicated to forming a band.

Michael Strub: Local Man of Mystery

Laughing, smiling, and yelling, these are all actions that make senior Michael Strub who he is. A man who is never serious and always crazy, he is a true man of mystery. So, who is the man behind the freckles?

"Michael Perry Strub is crazy with his non-stop witty outbursts," said fellow senior Billy Romweber. His witty outbursts include him using clever jokes such as, "What's Irish and stays out all night? Patty O'Furniture."

Michael Strub is a four-year wrestler and Bulldog Award winner; he claims that his involvement in this grappling game is why his personality is pound for pound the funniest and craziest of any other student at Batesville High School.

"There's something about the wrestlers, they're goofballs," said one of Strub's teachers, Charlie Zimmerman. Deep down, Strub claims he is a very serious man, scary even. So why don't we know the real Michael Strub? Strub always keeps his friends laughing, so they rarely see his serious side.

"I just like to have fun, and make other people laugh. Acting crazy makes school twice as fun as it already is." Even Zimmerman agrees. "He's fun," Zimmerman said.

During the writing process of this story, Strub continuously shouted funny stories. A yearbook staff member turned towards him and asked, "Why are you so crazy?" Strub's answer? "You have to live life to the fullest..."

Strub's plan after high school is to be a police officer, and he is going to live each day in the force by this motto. One this is for sure, BHS will miss this senior's wild antics.

A Walk Down Memory Lane...

Story By: Suzanne Grossman
Design By: Suzanne Grossman

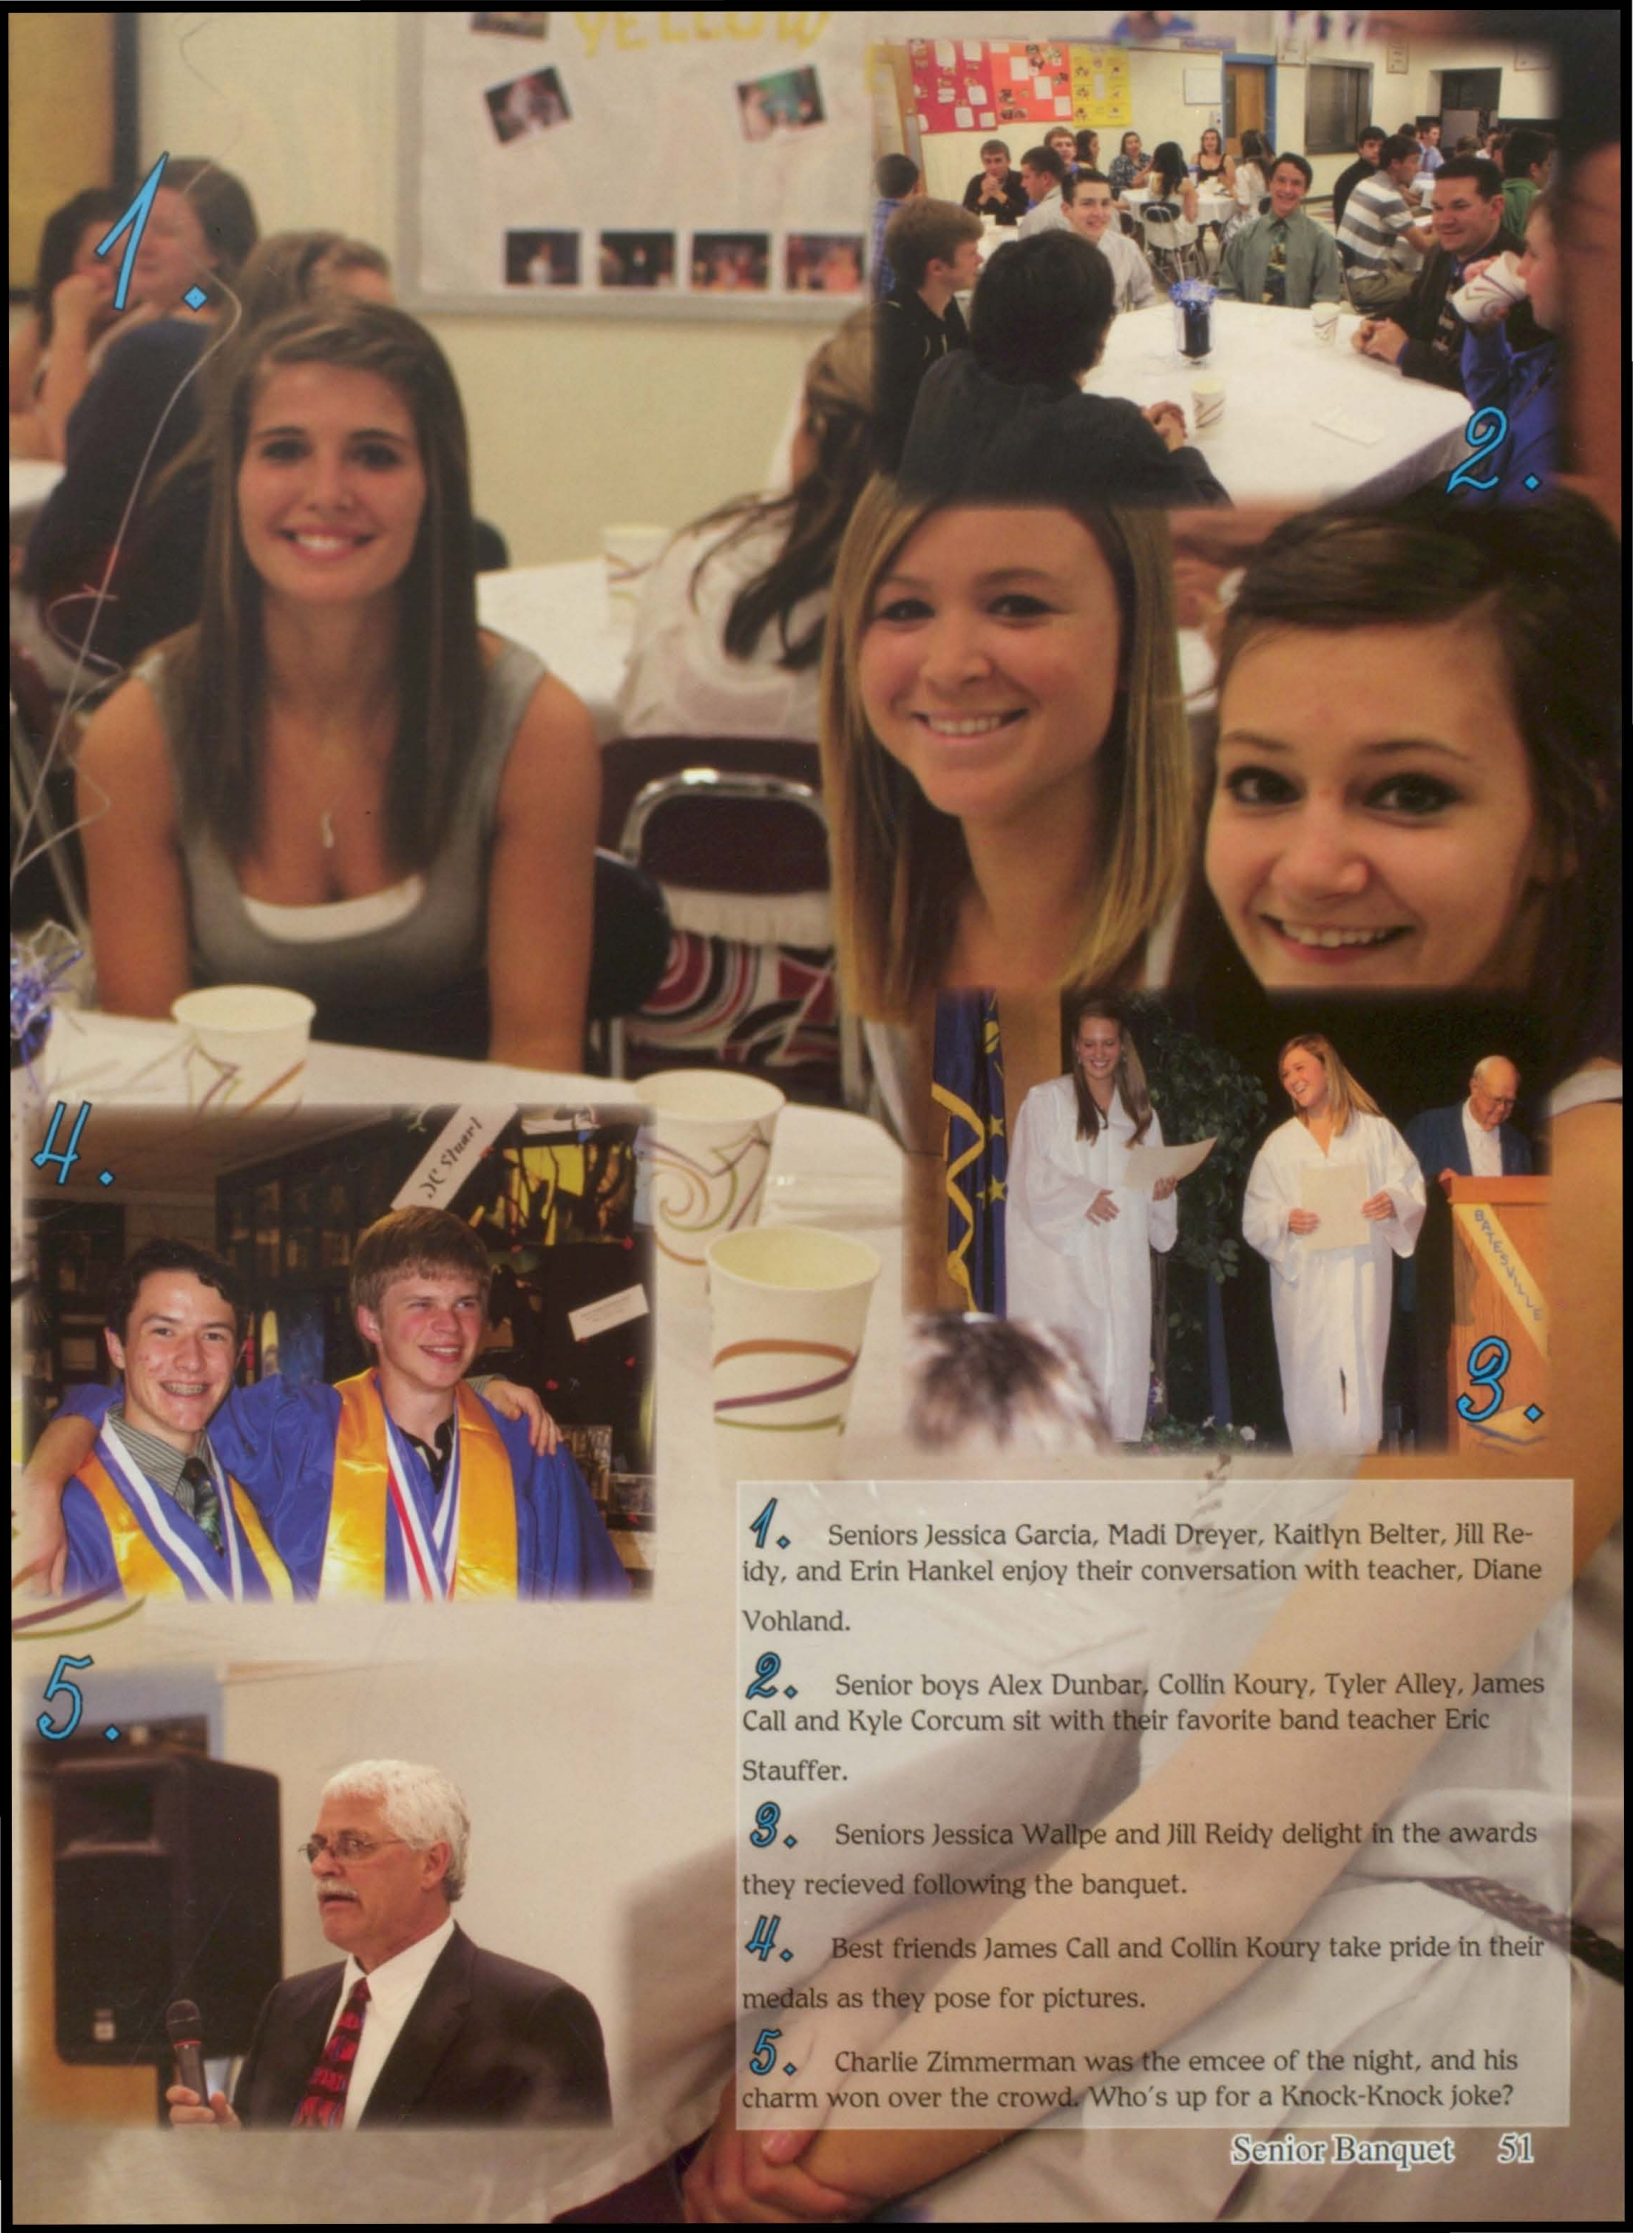

Conversation buzzes around the tables and tasty food is digested as teachers and seniors blend together one last time before graduation at the senior banquet. The night was bittersweet for the students who said goodbye to school, sports, teachers, and beloved friends.

It was a night to honor the seniors who have made it through to graduation; a night to delight in one's own and one's friends and peer's accomplishments over the past four years; it was a night to both remember old memories and create new ones. Both seniors Luke Williams and Brooke Bedel thoroughly enjoyed the evening filled with their best friends and favorite teachers. Bedel expressed her fear of her and her friends being separated into various colleges. Williams said, "I'm going to miss basketball the most because of the team and how successful we were." Megan Spreckleson, who organized the event, said, "There are some seniors who I will miss greatly."

As many seniors feel ready to escape the high school, many are also nervous about beginning the rest of their lives, either in college or the work force, where they are sure to meet challenges. Bedel said, "I regret not taking my GPA more seriously my freshman and sophomore year, but other than that I am pretty content." Williams also said he wishes he had taken more AP and ACP classes to prepare him for college, but is not going fret too long about it. Spreckleson said, "Every kid coming from BHS has growing up to do still, but academically have what they need to be successful."

The new tradition of a senior banquet was well-liked. Little Charlie's catered the event with spaghetti, garlic bread, salad, and brownie sundaes. Comments on the food were positive. Spreckleson said she would have liked more entertainment for the night. Dr. Roberts did his impression of Elvis for the seniors, and Bedel said, "It was really funny and nice that he let loose for us after all their years of hard work." As for suggestions for next year, Williams said, "I'd rather not wear the gowns for the awards. It was too hot!" Bedel would also have liked it to be in a more formal setting, possibly outside the high school at another venue. Senior parents said they would have liked tables, but Williams said, "I'm kind of glad the parents weren't there. It was a night just for us." The senior banquet will hopefully continue to be a success for years to come where ever it is held.

As the evening comes to a close, seniors pack up their awards and move out of the auditorium. They hug friends and family. As the realization hits that their last year of high school is rapidly ending, tears begin to fill the eyes of seniors who will forever cherish their high school memories. Although high school is over for the seniors, the lessons they learned here and the experiences they had have changed and shaped them for good.

Live Steel

Terra Claybrook trains almost every summer day in the art of sword fighting. She is taught by her stepdad, who has been made an honorary knight through the Society for Creative Anachronism, and practices with her brothers in their backyard. They practice live steel European sword fighting.

"Live steel means we use actual metal swords and armor," she said. "We only use foam or wooden swords for now. We don't have armor yet." She's been sword fighting since sixth grade, and she trains when she can during the school year.

"I like how it makes me feel like I have control of something," she said. "It's a good outlet for anger. Since the swords are foam, you aren't hurting anyone and can let out a lot of stress and frustration." She described sword fighting as "vivacious," because "it means full of life and energy, getting things done, and that's what sword fighting helps me do."

Pilot in Training: The Ben Luchow Story

Is it a bird? Is it a plane? No. It's a..... Well, actually it is a plane, and it's being flown by none other than Batesville High School's own Ben Luchow. Usually a high school junior is happy with having their driver's license, but not this extraordinary student. For some, like Luchow, the normal is not enough. The challenge to fly is just much too tempting.

For some, flying at this age in this family. With aviators running and grandfather, Luchow took flying Brian Jenkins, the head instructor and in the standard plane for trainees, of flight time. This is one of the this airport. Luchow's brother do badly because he is "pretty wrong.

Novel Idea

A flurry of fingers race across the keyboard, clicking and tapping as the creative process comes to life. After a long school day of math, reading, and writing, sophomore Sarah Limardo goes home only to work on her latest novel. She says her biggest passion is writing because it gives her "a sense of control" and she gets to "play God."

Since starting to write the summer before her freshman year the young novelist has written four novels and sent them to editors. Although none have been published, Limardo is not discouraged and continues to write. Limardo said writing is a "learn as you go" process. Limardo sent her books in to editors and joined inkpop.com, a teen writing site she describes as a "nerdfest." Limardo said both tactics have improved her writing vastly. Limardo said, "I can even write in my sleep!" Her friends support her and occasionally call her a nerd, but Limardo said, "I prefer the term intellectual bad[girl] rather than nerd."

Limardo plans to study creative writing at Indiana University and continue her dream of being published. Limardo's determination and creative mind will certainly get her published soon, so be sure to get her autograph before it is too late.

Flying Colors

Flags, rifles, and ribbons twist and turn through the air, colors flash and dance. The elaborate, vivid ballet is stopped short when two sticks clack against each other and fall to the floor. The ribbons are picked up, and the dance begins again.

Freshman Sarah Call is a member of the Batesville Flag Corps, also called Color Guard. They accompany the marching band by spinning flags, ribbons, and wooden rifles. They practice twice a week, once on their own and once with the band.

MAN OF THE PEOPLE

The yearbook staff struggled with what freshmen would get the honor of two album stories. After three hours of vigorous debate, and the dissolution of multiple fights, only one agreement was made--John Krieger. An informal poll of the student body proved Krieger is a friendly, man of the people with an inexplicable charm. This interview is an attempt to exploit and explain this charm.

Here's how it went:

JE: So John, what are your hobbies?

John stared at the ceiling for ten seconds hoping for inspiration; then I got my answer.

JK: Soccer, skiing, skateboarding, and chilling with my homies. Krieger started soccer at three years old and currently plays midfield, but he claims he can play everywhere.

JE: What is your favorite color of all time?

JK: Well, I like Majestic Burgundy, #4. (Apparently Krieger had the Crayola extended 150 color set.)

John Krieger is known for his excellent beat-boxing skills. Legend has it he was the beat mastermind behind every Dr. Dre album released since '92, (and he's only 15.)

JE: When did you start beat boxing?

JK: Fifth grade.

JE: Where is your favorite place to beat box?

JK: Under abandoned subways in the Bronx, New York.

JE: Can you really play the Didgeridoo? (The didgeridoo is a wind instrument native to Australia.)

JK: No, that's not true. I don't know who made it up.

JE: Alright John, if you could clear up any other myths about you, what would you like to set straight?

JK: There are a lot out there, but I want to let everyone know that I am not Hercules.

Notorious

"HAHA, It's FRIIIIIIIIIIIIIIIDAY!!!" rings through the halls every Friday. From first to fourth block, every student counts on the beloved words of science teacher Charlie Zimmerman to kick off their weekend.

Zimmerman said, "I started 'It's Friday' when I was in Bloomington. In 1996, I heard Jimmy Mad Dog Matis say it on Q95, and I guess I stole it from him." This isn't the only craze that makes "Z" one of the more intriguing teachers at BHS.

Zimmerman is known to pull out his treasured harmonica once in a while to entertain his students with "blues, church, folk, and Rock and Roll." According to "Z," "I think the students like it, but I also think they like seeing the teacher make a fool of himself."

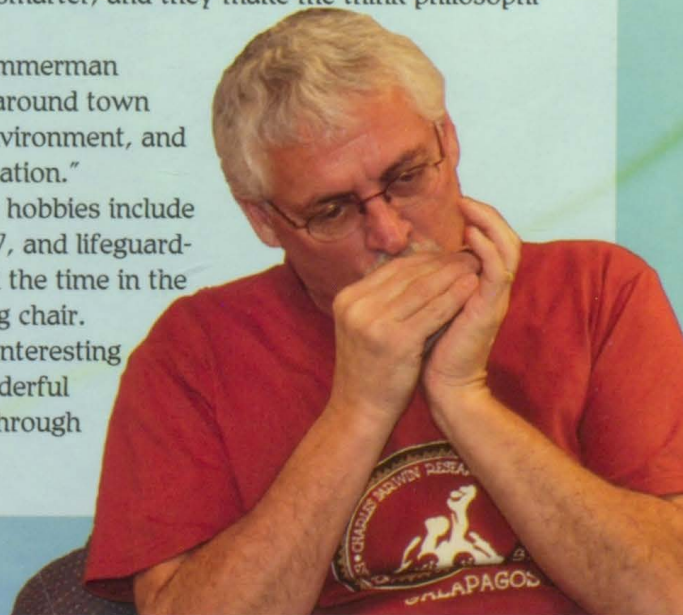

According to John Bruns, his playing is "Phenomenal!" Bruns said "Z's" classes make him feel smarter, and they make me think philosophically."

Outside of class, Zimmerman frequently rides on his bike around town because it is "good for the environment, and it's a good form of transportation."

"Z" claims his other hobbies include reading, fishing, watching TV, and lifeguarding. Students can find "Z" all the time in the summer atop the lifeguarding chair.

Zimmerman is one interesting teacher at BHS, and his wonderful antics will be heard ringing through the halls as long as he stays.

More THAN A Uniform

Story By: Grant Meyers
Design By: Emily Schebler

Screaming sirens, flashing lights, and 148 mph cars. This is what I picture when Officer Roope agrees to let me observe him for a part of two shifts. I am going to see what it's like to be in the line of danger as a law enforcement officer. I do not get to witness any car chases; however, both experiences are eye-opening.

Before we embark on our journey through the streets of Batesville, let's learn a little bit about the man who puts his life in danger every time he puts on the uniform. Blake Roope joined the Batesville High School staff three years ago as the School Resource Officer. Before he came to Batesville, Roope was a law enforcement officer for the Avon Police Department, and he worked in a prison near the Indianapolis area as well. During the summer months he continues his normal duties as a police officer in Batesville. "I generally work a couple shifts a week during the summer, mostly the late shift, though," said Roope.

BHS students may be familiar with Roope's duties at school, but on Friday August 6, 2010 and Thursday January 6, 2011, Roope was kind enough to allow me to ride with him off campus.

August 6 proved to be a rather quiet night. We patrolled multiple hours but didn't come across anything that required our attention. The only call of the night was about a possible drunk driver on Highway 46, which required a "consensual encounter." Roope observed that nothing was wrong. Roope stated that a consensual encounter is where an officer can stop someone and ask them questions, but the person they stop is not required to stay and talk with the officer if it is termed a consensual encounter by law. There were no more calls, and the night ended on a quiet note.

January 6 rolled around, and it was cold, snowy, and very icy. Once again, it was time to hit the streets with Roope. As I walked in the door, the phone rang with a call from a witness in Cross County Plaza. Juveniles were possibly attempting to break into cars. We responded to the call with Roope's co-worker, Officer Ryan Metcalf. We scanned the area, but never found the alleged suspects. We decided that we were going to walk through the nearby stores, and we came across two suspects who fit the description, but without the witness at hand it was nearly impossible for us to know the truth about the situation. One half-hour later, calls poured in across the radio for several 10-50 PDs, which stands for a wreck with property damage. The roads were pure sheets of ice, and over 12 wrecks had occurred on the interstate. Our duty was to tend to the wreck on State Road 46. We rolled up to the scene and saw two cars involved in the wreck. It was our duty to clear State Road 46 by directing traffic. After an hour, the wreck was clear and another hour of patrolling went by. We got called to yet another wreck on 46. A female slid off the road. We stopped traffic and helped her out get back off the sidewalk. After several hours went by, and the roads began to clear. At 8:47, another call came across the radio about were not able to spot anything, and the rest of the night remained quiet.

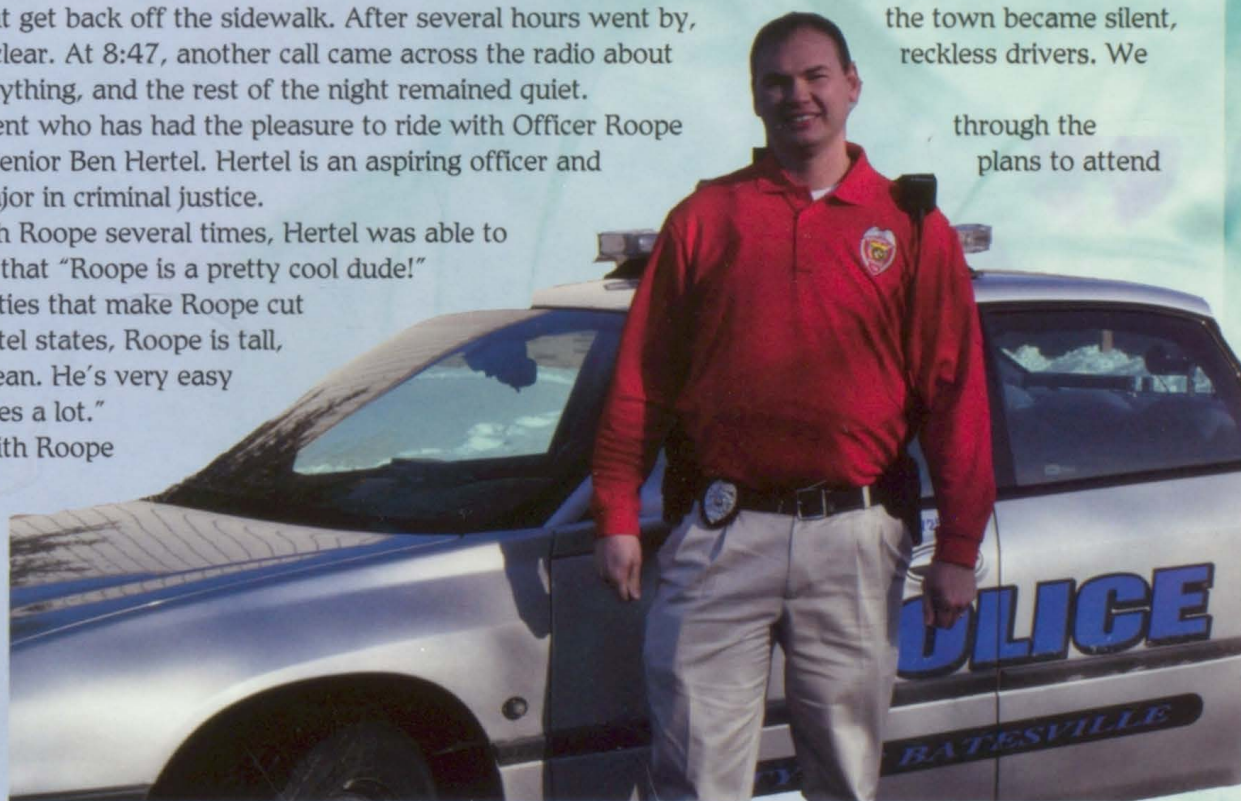

One other student who has had the pleasure to ride with Officer Roope mentorship program is senior Ben Hertel. Hertel is an aspiring officer and Indiana University to major in criminal justice.

After riding with Roope several times, Hertel was able to make the generalization that "Roope is a pretty cool dude!"

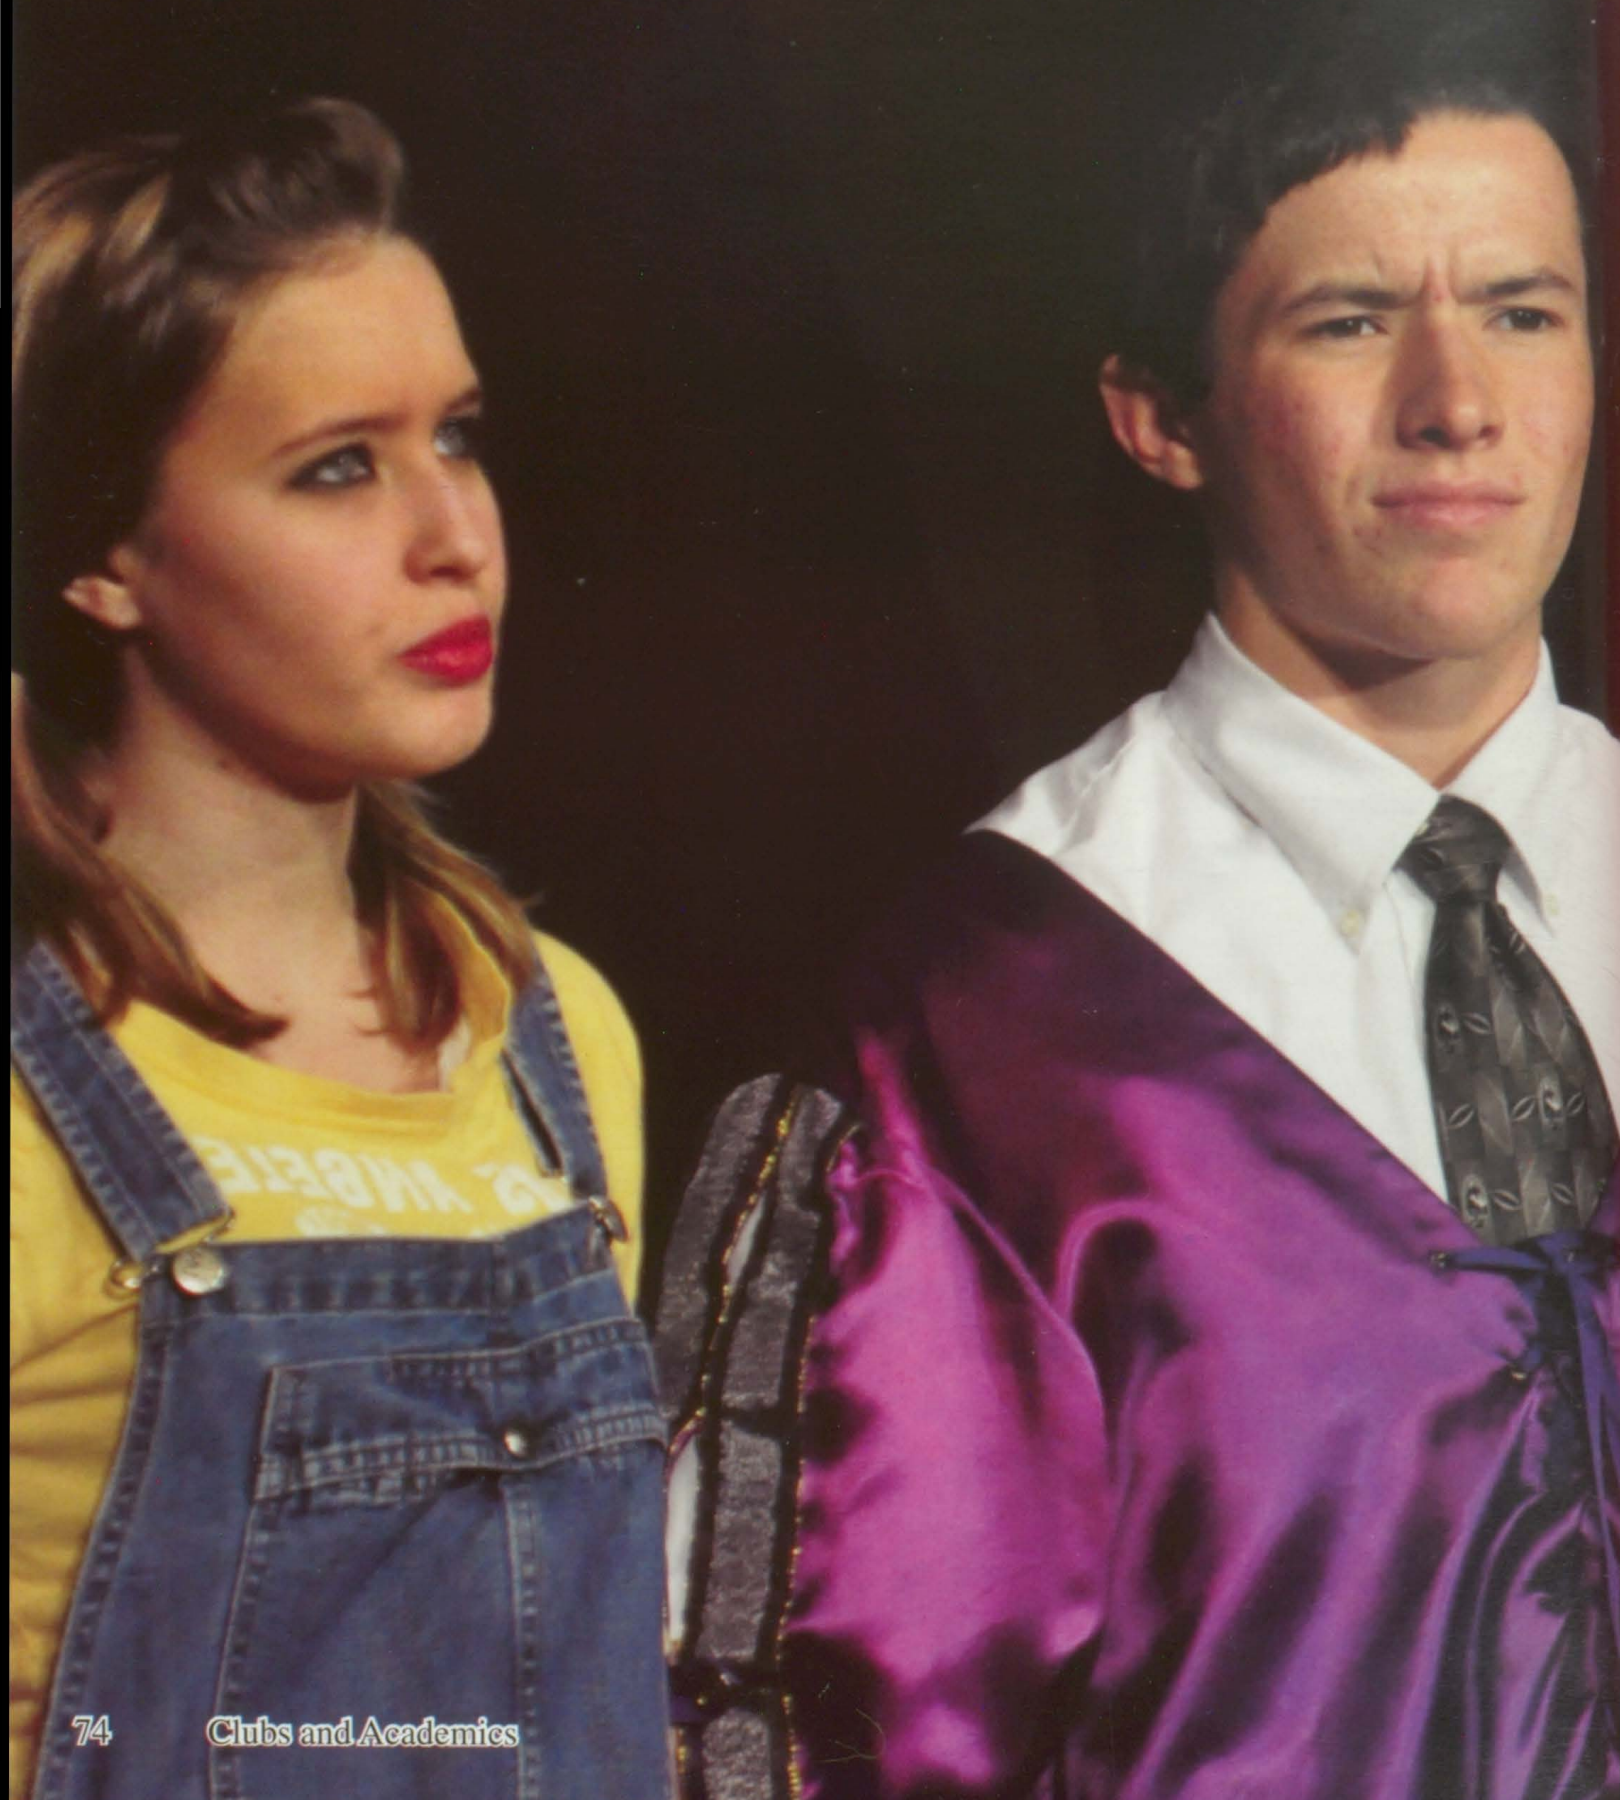

As for the qualities that make Roope cut out for the position, Hertel states, Roope is tall, nice and doesn't look mean. He's very easy going, laid-back, and jokes a lot."

The journeys with Roope not only gave me a better understanding for what it means to put on the uniform, but it also gave me a better understanding of the good character that surrounds Officer Roope.

German Trip 2011

Six countries. Ten days. 23 adults. 13 students.

"I thought it was interesting that the students were better at adapting to different things than the adults," said German teacher Andy Koors, who organized the trip. "The adults, I think, still expected things to be the same and expected to be treated like Americans, but the students already knew from class that things would be different."

Sophomore Austin Wilhelm, one of the students on the trip, said, "It was so similar and different at the same time." Senior Joe Fortkamp said the most interesting difference was "paying for toilets." Public restrooms usually cost 0.60 Euros, or about 89 cents. Many things the students take for granted were different on the trip, such as meals.

"They're much placement of silverware and first," said Wilhelm. "You use this spoon, and for the fork, but in America they'd to you wrapped up in a

None of the 23 adults and 13 students can deny that the German trip was something they'll remember forever. "Everyone should go to Europe at least once in their life," said Wilhelm. "Most of us came from Europe, the culture is amazing, the people are friendly, and it's just an amazing place."

Darrick Cox dribbles down the court, spins out his defender, and shoots the ball. Two more points for the teachers. Senior Matt Kirchoff gets the ball and passes it off to senior Josh Rhoads. Rhoads races down the court and passes the ball to senior James Jewell. Jewell shoots the ball, and the crowd goes wild as the ball goes through the basket.

This is a scene similar to what spectators saw at the 3rd annual SADD staff versus students basketball game. There was an intense rivalry between the two teams as the students tried to redeem themselves after the last two years' losses. Unfortunately the staff members came out victorious again this year. The most difficult part was coming up with new things to say. He said, "After a while you start repeating yourself." At half time, the Batesville Singers performed the Black Eyed Peas song, "I Gotta Feeling." While it was hard to hear the group, everyone enjoyed the performance.

The teachers can definitely look forward to another hard-fought game next year as the rivalry intensifies yet again.

FFA-mazing Changes

It's a Sunday morning around 6 a.m., and FFA Advisor Cassie Mumaw answers her ringing phone. A truck-load of fruit is going to be delivered in an hour to the high school. Mumaw calls her officers, and they scramble to get FFA members over to the school to unload. Luckily, not many people sleep in on Sundays, and the FFA group was able to unload the semi.

This is one of the many fundraisers FFA has. If FFA members sell a certain amount of fruit, they get discounts on their FFA jackets. They also have a canned food drive to help the community on Halloween. This year they collected 100 non-perishable items to donate to the local food pantry.

FFA members obviously do more than raise funds; they also compete. The national convention is a huge competition with FFA members from all over the nation. This event happened October 21-23 in Indianapolis. Fourteen Batesville students went this year, and they participated in sessions that recognized award-winners and workshops that taught them more about the FFA history. This is an exciting event for many of the new members that encourages them to continue with FFA in their high school years.

Changes in FFA this year are that more members are enrolling. There were 40 members enrolled in FFA during the 2010-2011 school year. FFA is becoming more popular due to the fact they are competing in more contests. Sophomore Rae Strobel said, "I joined FFA because it seemed fun, and I liked Ag-related activities." Many students also join to meet new people and have fun with friends. Several students have achieved state level status in various contests. Senior Andrea Doll was one state-bound member. In the summer of 2010, Doll earned third place in state for Small Animal Production Proficiency. Some other contests are Crops and Forestry. Members of Crops are Chad Jones, Adam Harmeyer, Josh Nuhring, and Chad Ensweller. Forestry members include Andrea Doll, Conner Price, Zach Koehne, and Katie Miller. Michelle Narwold also earned a state degree in the summer of 2010.

Another recent change is that 2010-2011 was Advisor Cassie Mumaw's first full year. Last year she took over FFA in January. Because of this, members who haven't been very active are now joining in the contests.

Being an FFA member includes a lot of experience in leadership skills and education about agriculture. Mumaw said, "Being an FFA member is an experience every individual should encounter." FFA helps prepare one for the future through leadership contests that occur during the year. Freshman Jacob Schwab said, "It inspires students to become closer to the environment." Students can't have enough inspiration, so bring on these FFA-mazing changes.

Meet Jillius Caesar, Admiral Cheddar, Darth Moore, Nurse Am Rhine, Cap'n Call, and Sergeant Squeaky. They are more commonly known as Jill Crane, Collin Koury, Shawn Moore, Maurissa Amrhein, James Call, and Rachel Laker, and they are the captains of the Batesville High School Academic Team. As such, they all have official nicknames. According to Sergeant Squeaky, students looking to join Academic Team should "be prepared for our unusual traditions."

Academic Team tests students' knowledge in five different subjects: math, English, science, fine arts, and social studies. Students are divided into smaller teams based around one of the five subjects, and each team has a captain. The captains compete as a team in the final Interdisciplinary round. As Claire Crane put it, "It's really fun, it's not like some stuffy competition, where there are overachiever types answering all the questions. There's a lot of play with our work." According to Spanish teacher Cindy Julcarima, Team, those who aren't time "cheering on the teams cally send the answers to the

it's fun for nerds...
Not that it's only

But the real fun starts after the meets. On the bus ride home, they play "Mafia." Jill Crane said, "It's a complicated 'Heads Up, 7 Up' involving murder and intrigue." As the bus nears Batesville High School, senior James Call stands up and acts as a conductor while the entire bus sings "The Star-Spangled Banner," holding the last note until the bus stops. Sometimes the last note continues for almost a full minute. Afterwards, if the team won the meet, they all have dinner at Classic Pizza.

Not that it's easy to win. Laker said Academic Team is "challenging," and "makes you think differently than you usually would in school." Practices are held twice a week and feature a computer program called "Knowledge Master," among other enrichment activities. Some members have been known to blare Weird Al music to aid concentration.

Even though it can be difficult, Jill Crane describes Academic Team as "Nerdfun. Because it's fun for nerds." She quickly added, "Not that it's only for nerds!" According to Julcarima, anyone wishing to join the ranks of Admiral Cheddar, Cap'n Call, and Sergeant Squeaky just needs "a sense of humor, strong curiosity, and a drive to learn."

May the Breast Team Win

Mary K. Cambron and friend Domenica Cohen create a photo finish during the Making Strides for Breast Cancer 5k. Bystanders cheer on the duo as they cross the pink finish line, arms extended in the air.

Saturday, October 9 was the very first "Making Strides for Breast Cancer" 5k walk at Liberty Park. Cambron backed this 5k ever since the idea was presented months earlier. "This really hits home with me, since I'm a survivor of this cancer," said Cambron. Mrs. C's life was dramatically affected at age 42, when she was diagnosed with breast cancer. Cambron's cancer has since gone into remission and she is now an avid walker.

The 5k involved all of Southeastern Indiana, but there was some friendly competition among the school buildings of the Batesville Community School Corporation. Each separate building assembled its own team to participate in the 5k. As a group, BCSC teams decided to dedicate their walking to the late Donna Little. Little was a teacher at the Primary School, who lost her battle with breast cancer last year. The walkers set a goal of raising $1000. The money raised benefits breast cancer research. Money was raised solely by donations, but participants were confident in reaching this goal. To help meet the goal, fellow art teacher Amy McCabe presented the idea of making t-shirts to help raise money. Her visual communications designed shirts, and sold them to students during school in order to raise money and awareness about the 5k and breast cancer itself. Senior art guru Allison Krieger was one of the shirt designers. "The whole class designed shirts," said Krieger, "and the ideas were sent to the other Batesville schools in order for the final designs to be selected."

Cambron was all smiles the day of the race. "It's a great feeling to cross the finish line," said Cambron, "It's pretty overwhelming to look around and see your friends supporting you during the race." Donating money or time to races like these can help save the lives of great women everywhere. Because of research money, Mrs. Cambron has been able to touch the lives of hundreds of students through art, and live a happy and healthy life.

The Bestest Plays Ever Performed

Bright lights flood the stage, leaving the audience in darkness. The actors take to the stage and begin acting out the sad story of two teens wrought with grief after losing their "most likable friend" to an accident. Then the scene changes to the south of France, where two knights embark on a quest to slay a dragon and run away. The blind prophet Teiresias makes an appearance in "Ancient Greece/Renaissance Times," and the host of a dinner party reveals himself to be Dracula. One member of the audience stands up and demands to know where these storylines are going. Her husband shouts, "Why are we here, again? Do we have a kid in this or something?"

It's okay, folks, it's all part of the show. The BHS Drama Club performed "The Worstest Play Ever Wrote" this fall, along with three other one-act comedies: "The Actor's Nightmare," "15 Reasons Not to Be in a Play," and "Check, Please! Take 3." Junior Graham Hawley played the indignant audience member's husband in "The Worstest Play" and described it as "a conglomerate of storylines and characters from stories. It's about a writer and his play, which is totally random."

"The Actor's Nightmare" featured an accountant, played by James Call, who finds himself taking the place of an actor who has broken his legs. He and it changes constantly. After "Private Lives," he must improvise stand in a garbage can. He ends all-too-realistic execution scene.

Hawley liked "15 Reasons were a lot of different people and ment." Senior Tyler Alley, who had and "Check, Please! Take 3," said the play was "very humorous." The and the characters listed reasons weather complications to Aus- "Plays suck!"

"Check, Please! Take 3" was the grand finale of the evening. It tells the story of two friends "who go on these silly, embarrassing dates [with other people] and begin to realize they're meant for each other," said Alley. Hawley played the male lead. One of his dates was only after his vote, another didn't speak English, and another was stalking the waiter, played by Alley. The female lead, played by Steacy Gryspeerdt, didn't fare much better: her dates included a Guitar Hero fanatic, her cousin (accidentally), and the man behind the movie trailer voice-overs who can't remember how to talk normally.

Alley said, "I think there is a sort of camaraderie that you get with people" in Drama Club. Despite the strange nature of the plays, the only angry theater-goers were part of the show.

Gaige Wintz stares at the colorful task at hand. He wipes sweat off his brow. Deep in thought, Wintz pauses to take a bite from his complimentary donut. Wintz laughs when he nearly eats his paintbrush and paints with his donut. The focused art student shrugs it off and goes back to work.

Wintz was among approximately 220 students who helped paint the 25 holiday-themed decorative boxes on display around town this winter. The art department drafted all the classes to help out, including ceramics. These students worked vigorously from 8 a.m. through the 3:10 bell to finish this even stayed after school, helped out in some way, drafted by Mrs. Cambron's According to sophomore Drew Padilla, the best part of this project was "feeling like I one-up'd Oprah."

These students worked vigorously from 8 a.m. through the 3:10 bell to finish this project...

This project, created and funded by the Batesville Beautification League, was presented to art teacher Amy McCabe in mid-November and was expected to be completed by Thanksgiving. McCabe was skeptical "every day" of meeting their deadline. The art department came through in the clutch and finished the 25 boxes after four days of non-stop work.

By doing projects like this, not only does the art department help in the beautification of Batesville, but the students also learn important lessons. They learn how to have steady hands, manage time, work as a team, and fix mistakes. They also learn not to wear nice clothes to art class and not to lean on wet paint.

Building the Emerald City

Story By: Madeline Stevens
Design By: Madeline Stevens

Song fills the air as four cheerful individuals stroll arm-in-arm, singing "We're off to see the wizard, the wonderful wizard of Oz!" The group is comprised of a scarecrow, a man made of tin, a talking lion, and a young girl from Kansas with her faithful dog. Behind them in the distance, the glorious, shining Emerald City towers over the horizon. This scene isn't spontaneous. Just as L. Frank Baum had to craft each word of his novel The Wonderful Wizard of Oz by hand, so is this Oz the result of months of preparation. The Emerald City had to be constructed and painted, Toto had to be trained, and normal humans had to be transformed into the Scarecrow, Tin Man, and Cowardly Lion through the magic of stage makeup. On stage, it may look simple, but there's so much more to see behind the scenes.

Art teacher Mary Cambron supervised the set-building and painting. She worked with students on the set "two weeks before spring break and worked over spring break," she said. "We probably put in a month and a half after school and on Saturdays." Cambron said that the set was made of many recycled and reused materials, and the set pieces themselves were left the Beast" and repainted for munchkin houses were made was used as packing material, possible." However, due to the "Even if it's raining or freezing,

She said, "The type the way you apply it is. Stage Senior Hillary Addison, who played the Wicked Witch of the West, said, "I was completely green—my face, my hands. I got a new nose made from spirit gum... It kept falling off." Her makeup was particularly difficult to remove afterwards. "I was still green for days," she said.

All seem to agree that the behind-the-scenes hassle is worth it. Addison said, "It was a lot of fun. Although it took a lot of hours of practice...it was worth it." Vogelsang assures people, "It's really fun. A lot of people might think it's stressful, but there's a lot of laughs." Cambron went so far as to say "I think it was the best high school production to date." She also had this to say to anyone considering helping the drama club create a whole new world onstage next year: "Everybody should join. If you can saw or hold a paintbrush, you should join."

BUILDING For The Future

As Brady Cavinee draws back the ball, Wes Goldsmith sprints down the field. Brady throws, and the ball goes deep. Will Wes catch it? He catches it! Touchdown Bulldogs!

This play was due to many key players in the 2010 season. One key player, quarterback Brady Cavinee, broke a school record throwing 20 touchdown passes. Wes Goldsmith was another key player and tied the record with 12 touchdown receptions. Two more key players were Kevin Kreuzman and Blaine Timonera, both seniors that legitimately strengthened the team.

Coach Eric Heppner is proud with how the season ended. The final record was 7-5. Goldsmith said, "The record could've been better, and the game against Hamilton Heights should've ended better." Heppner was concerned about having a losing record because of few players returning with varsity experience. Heppner said, "The most important game was a game they lost against EC." The players practiced really hard up to game came the team for the lead. Gold-defense and offense it came down to the just couldn't get the went all the way to the end with EC scoring a last minute touchdown.

"The offense was strong this year."

Goldsmith said, "The team's defense was a weakness but improved as the year went on." Goldsmith also said, "The offense was strong this year."

In the ELAC, the team tied for second along with the Greensburg Pirates. A major highlight for the team and coaches this season was beating Greensburg and Rushville in Sectional. Big wins such as these encouraged the team throughout the season.

Injuries were a huge part of the season, as well. Many were out for concussions from hits to the head. Mylz Hankins sustained an injury in a scrimmage against Triton Central. The injury took him out for the rest of the season. Heppner said, "We missed him greatly as he was one of very few returning starters on defense."

The 2010 graduating class consists of 20 seniors, including Goldsmith. "I think most of the seniors are key players that the team is losing, but the sophomores and juniors will fill in well," said Goldsmith. Coach Heppner expects 34 freshmen to join next season, and BHS looks forward to another successful season.

As Junior Nick Burton walks up to take his penalty shot, he causes the crowd to sit on the edge of their seats in anticipation. Will he make the game-winning shot? Burton goes in for his shot, and in that split second, everyone holds their breath. To the relief of Burton, the team, and all the fans, his shot goes in and helps his team win the Batesville Boy's Soccer invitational.

After winning the tourney, the boys went 5-7-5 on the season. The team has hope in their strong freshmen class, and the sophomores and juniors, who will be more experienced next season. Sophomore Andy Nolan said, "This year was more of a building year, next year we will be better."

The boys also described their season as less eventful this year. Compared to the usual practical jokes and goofing around usually associated with the men's soccer this season included little horseplay. Junior Drew Coleman said, "Even David was normal," referring to David Lehfeldt, the clown of the team. However, the boys still had fun at their annual spaghetti dinner. They went to the YMCA and participated in minute-to-win-it challenges for some team bonding.

The boys are looking forward to improving and doing better next season with their strong finish and talented underclassmen. They do not forget how great it felt to be victorious in the invitational and will strive to accomplish that again.

Running In the Rain

Sarah Schwegman, senior, jumps to catch the ball at third base to get the first out of the game. She glances over at short-stop Carley Paul, senior, who then shouts out words of motivation and appreciation. Good friends Paul and Schwegman are ready to start off their final season together despite the dismal, rainy weather.

Coach Connie Dickman said, "We just couldn't get into the flow of playing." She said the rain prevented them from getting out to the field to practice, and they had to stay indoors at the middle school old gym. Paul and Schwegman also expressed frustration due to the rain because it cancelled or postponed many of their games.

The girls finished their regular season with a record of nine wins and 13 losses. As she coached softball at Greensburg High School, Coach Dickman considered the games against the Pirates to be very important. Losing both games in the regular season to Greensburg, the girls entered the second round of sectionals hoping to defeat their fierce opponent. Key players in Dickman's opinion are the seniors, Paul, Schwegman, and Fawn Ryan for their leadership and experience they show on the field. This proved true in the first game of sectionals against Madison, where the whole team stayed determined through the whole game, but double plays involving Ryan and Paul boosted the team into victory. In the second round of sectionals, the bulldogs were the underdogs against the Greensburg Pirates after losing to them twice in the regular season. The second round game of sectionals against Greensburg, which was delayed by rain twice, ended up being a five to three win for the lady dogs. Advancing into the championship game against the favorite to win the tournament, South Dearborn, the team was tired after already defeating the pirates the same day. After a hard-fought battle the girls lost the game five to four, but played their hardest and everyone was proud of their efforts.

Although the rain deterred the team from "getting in the flow" as Dickman said, she also commented that they were hard-working and really appreciated the senior leadership. Paul said she enjoys being a senior because "coach lets us help out and run parts of practice," Schwegman said. "She listens to our opinions as seniors for what we need to work on." This good relationship between the coaches and players is surely what brought success to the girls' season this year. Paul experienced having her mother as a coach. She said, "I've really enjoyed having my mom as a coach for both volleyball and softball and will miss her next year while at college."

Paul also likes having her younger sister, Chelsea Paul, freshman, on the team. Even though Paul and Schwegman feel the team seems somewhat cliquey by grade levels, they both have fun hanging with Chelsea Paul and other freshmen. From a freshman point of view, Brooke Rohlfing feels as if there is "not really any cliques within the team." No matter what, the team gets along. Schwegman said, "We just already have our set friends on the team."

Although the seniors will be a big loss for the team, the freshman class is big and strong. Hopefully next year has less rain so the team can enjoy a consistent and successful season.

Kickin' It up a notch

Junior Maddie Lambert draws her leg back, clears the soccer ball out of the goal box, and restores safety to the Bulldog defense. The crowd sighs in relief after another great Bulldog play.

Lambert was one of many key players on the girl's soccer team. These Lady Bulldogs were not the first to have a great season.

"The teams we played against had massive skill," said senior Molly White, "and we might have not won sectionals, but we had fun."

Fourth-year coach Derek Jones, said, "This past season was a lot of fun for me. It's always sad when it comes to an end. We were hoping to win another sectional this year and continue playing for a few more weeks, but it just didn't work out for us this time."

All-season didn't and planned, coaches had sports teams, dogs became a

Key season strength-relationship and it really showed in their games. One such moment was during sectionals when senior Katie Thomas and Lambert passed the ball back and forth, scoring a tying goal. The girl's soccer team ended the season with a record of 11-3-3.

"I'm going to miss the girls," said White, "I was the only one who cried on Senior Night, because I'm going to miss the team." It is always hard to say goodbye to a team, a family. White can be sure she and the other seniors will be missed next year as the women's soccer team continues to grow and kick things up a notch.

Stellar SEASON

From the backboard to the hoop, the 2010-2011 men's basketball team mastered the court.

"We destroyed Greensburg in sectionals this year," said junior Brady Cavinee. Senior Nicholas Burton said, "It was awesome because they, Greensburg, had a six-game win streak against us, two wins came from games earlier in the year, and then we beat them for a Sectional Title." On March 12, the boys defeated Greensburg for the Sectional title. The following weekend, the Bulldogs defeated Roncalli for the Regional title. The team carried this winning attitude through the end of the season. Coach Aaron Garret proudly said, "We made it to the Final Four of Class 3A."

Out of all their winning games, Garret fondly remembered one in particular. "[I remember the] Regional championship game against Roncalli. The electricity in the crowd, the effort of the players, the support of the kids on the bench, and the game-winning shot by Luke Williams make it a game that will be remembered for a lifetime. Standing on the floor after the game watching our community celebrate together and seeing the support of our high school students makes all of the hard work worth it."

Members of the team agree one group they found challenging was the East Central Trojans.

"They seemed to play their best games against us, and we just couldn't pull ahead of them and get a win," said Burton. The boys made it to Semi-State and went to play against Washington at Seymour, but unfortunately were defeated. The boys ended the year with a great record of 18-7.

"Aaron Garret has only been coaching for 3 years, but he knows his stuff," said senior Wes Goldsmith. "I mean he's gotten us this far, he must be doing something right." Garret has encouraged team bonding this year, as well.

"Before every Saturday game the entire JV and Varsity teams go to a senior's house to have lunch, and we watch college basketball on the TV," said Burton. With the coach's knowledge and the team's chemistry, there couldn't be any more that Batesville High school could ask for in a basketball team.

"Every year is different. One thing the team learned from last year's group was the importance of working hard," said Garret. "The greatest strength of this year's group was the ability to be corrected once and to never repeat the same mistake." This willingness to learn and grow from mistakes led the men's basketball team through a stellar season.

BAD NEWS... There's Rain

Spring of 2011 was named the third rainiest spring in Indiana since 1902. Unfortunately for the BHS baseball team, this meant that game after game was cancelled. Senior James Jewell said, "There were too many [rain-outs] to count. There were around 15." Regardless of the rainy season, the boys seemed to enjoy this season. Sophomore Will Ollier said, "It was a fun season. We didn't have a very good record, but it was fun."

While all the players did a good job, there were several standout players. Cory Werner, a senior, had some key hits. One of these hits was a much-needed Grand Slam. James Jewell, senior, had multiple key throws. Eric Meyer and Ryan Hazelwood, seniors, were huge in the batting department, and freshman Cassidy Kase had a massive diving stop against Lawrenceburg. These guys were not alone though. It takes more than a few people to win a team, the boys excelled in a baseball game. As a hitting and pitching team, the boys excelled in

The regular season did not go as well as the team would have liked. They had a record of 4 wins and 14 losses. Jewell said, "It could have been better." Unfortunately, the team lost to their rival Greensburg twice, but they have plans to beat them next year.

On May 27th, the Bulldogs faced the Scottsburg Warriors in the first round of sectionals at Greensburg. The team played hard, but in the end they were defeated by the Warriors. The final score was 6-11. During the game, Werner had two homeruns and a double, and Jewell had two doubles.

Year of Unity and Example

It's a cold and windy day in the month of March. Students run in the halls, sweat through P90X in the gym, and hop up and down stairs. The sound of feet pounding down stairs, makes teachers look up in confusion, wondering what's going on?

This is a normal practice for the Bulldog track team when the weather is ugly. The coaches of the track team went to clinics to learn different practicing techniques. Coach Lisa Gausman changed the pre-season conditioning to include a program called P90X. Gausman thought this would improve technique and work the team. She also included an organized core work out and included therabands. The team took weight lifting a little more seriously this year. The result of all this new technique showed by athletes getting personal bests week after week.

The ending record for the girl's team was 29-3, for the boy's record was 29-3. Both of the teams' three losses were to East Central. When conference came around, the coaches thought the boys' team had a chance to win, but East Central pulled ahead with 11 points.

In sectionals, the top four finishers moved on to regionals. For the Lady Bulldogs, none came in first place, but Ginny Westerfeld, Erin Lanning, Steacy Gryspeerdt, Alexandra Lake, Courtney McCray, Sarah Weaver, Sam Brandt, Michaela Westerfeld, Kendall Jordan, Rylee Goldsmith, Anna Meyer, and Ali Roperall went to regionals. Unfortunately none of the Lady Bulldogs placed enough in regionals to move on to state.

For the boys' sectionals, many came in first. Hayden Merkel came in first in the 1600m run and the 800m run. The 4x400 team advanced, consisting of Hayden Merkel, Chris Giesting, Mike Hoeing and Tyler Leising. The 4x100 team consisting of Trevor Tucker, Chris Giesting, Connor Jeffers, and Tyler Leising. Others who went to regional included Mike Hoeing, Nick Vodsack, Hayden Merkel, and Jon Lanning. In regionals Giesting and Merkel were the only boys representing Batesville.

At the state competition, Giesting and Merkel ran the best they could. Merkel ran a personal best in the 1600m run placing eleventh overall. Giesting ran a personal best on the 400m run and placed first overall, defeating last year's defending champion. Giesting ran in the Midwest Meet of Champions with winning seniors in each event competing from Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio. Giesting ran his hardest and beat the state record. Some say he is the fastest kid in Indiana.

The track team had its strengths and weaknesses. An area of weakness was in field events and hurdles. Gausman plans to fix that by having the team lift and condition more. Gausman said, "A field house would be a great benefit for the team and the community." The team's strength worked for the running events by evening out the hurdles and field events. When Batesville was going up against EC it was always very tight. EC only won because their hurdlers and field events were better.

The team will have big shoes to fill next year with many seniors leaving. Gausman said, "I have an awesome group of seniors this year." Some seniors include Jon Lanning, Trevor Tucker, Collin Koury, Chris Giesting, and Alexandra Lake. Coach Cassie Mumaw said, "Jon Lanning is one that leads by example and gives his 100% everyday at practice."

The coaches were really proud of this season for many reasons. Coach Emily Weberding said, "Team leadership and unity made me proud because it was outstanding this year and showed in meet results." The Batesville community was proud of this year's teams, as well.

all day. ERR DAY

From singing and dancing in the locker rooms to "war paint," the volleyball ladies rocked the court this year. The ladies' volleyball this year was a family reunion, partly because Varsity Coach Kateri Paul has been coaching the ladies for years. Paul said, "It was a special season. Our team consisted mainly of seniors that I have coached since they were in fourth grade. [A group] can't spend that many years together and not be close."

On Senior Night, the freshmen girls, coaches, and junior varsity ladies allowed varsity seniors to take over the court. "This season was different because of the number of seniors I had on the team. I have never had six seniors on my team before. The team was loaded with talent and experience!" Paul said. This talent shined on senior night. "Seniors started and played most of the senior night game. It was really awesome," said senior Sarah Schwegman. Senior Eron Fledderman said, "We also had black war paint/stickers for senior night."

These ladies felt that the whole season was planned out for them. With another victory performance for the EIAC, the ladies were undefeated. Almost every game was an easy win.

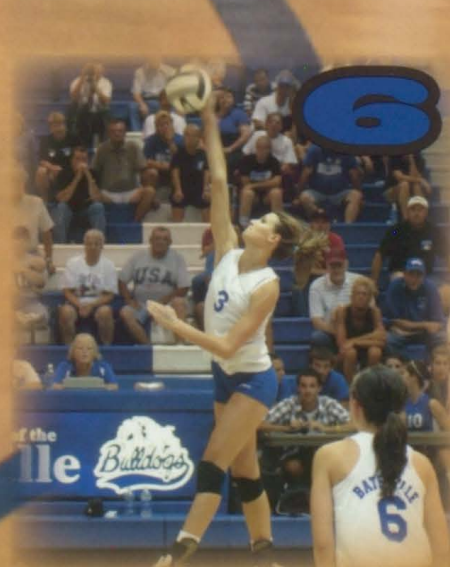

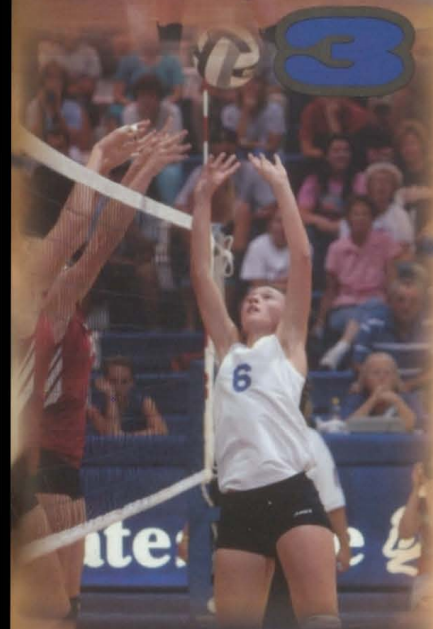

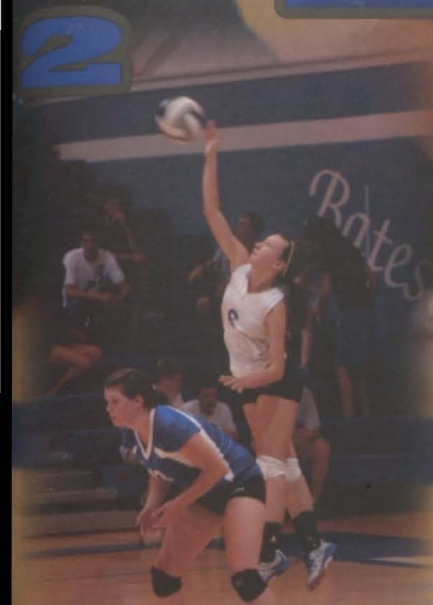

"It really felt as if everything just fell into place this season," said senior Fawn Ryan. The girls and coaches shared a special bond through the whole season, and it really showed this year.

"This year was just incredible; it was a really good way to end my volleyball career," said senior Carley Paul.

After their loss at semi-state against the Brebeuf Braves, the girls' awesome season came to an end. "We were not at the top at our game against Brebeuf. We couldn't afford to make any mistake against the talented Braves, and unfortunately we had quite a few errors," said Coach Paul.

Despite the errors, the most memorable aspect of the season was the overwhelming amount of supporting fans who attended regionals.

"With all the fan support, it might just be the most memorable event not just this year, but in my coaching career," said Coach Paul. "As a team we do a lot of bonding and goal setting." Paul said the girls even came up with a saying for the season—"all day, 'err day." This phrase sums up the season nicely; this volleyball family truly exuded energy and spirit all day, every day.

As senior Brooke Bedel pulls her arms back to swing, a certain suspense covers the yard. She swings her arms forward, and the golf ball flies. Bedel watches the great tee shot, which puts her in the lead.

"Golf is actually more difficult than people think it is," said sophomore Mary Fegley. Fegley, who held the best record for the 2010-2011 season, said the team ended with a record of 47 wins and 40 losses. However, the girls swept away the Triple Crown with the help of key players Mary Fegley, Brooke Bedel, Staci Records, Brittany Vogelsang, and Lauren Duncan. The girls won the Triple Crown by coming in first for Ripley County, EIAC. They also came in first for sectionals.

"The phrase we would always use was 'It Happens,'" said sophomore Lauren Duncan. This quote helped keep optimistic attitudes flowing throughout the season. The girls took it to mean that they will have their bad days, but no matter what happens, they will always stay positive. The girls also sang and joked around with each other to and from the matches.

One Big Family

Story By: Emily Schebler

It's a Tuesday evening, and the cheerleaders are preparing for the coming weekend games. All of the girls laugh as freshman Kuyhlia Stuart screams as loud as she possibly can after executing the stunt that her group has been working on for months. Practice continues, interrupted at regular intervals by laughter. By the end of practice, everyone's sides hurt from laughing.

While it seems that the cheerleaders' practices are fun and games, in reality, the girls work extremely hard to prepare for the games. Every practice begins with conditioning: walk-ups, jumping jacks, and jump conditioning. After conditioning, the cheerleaders practice their jumps. They then prepare for the games. This involves creating formations and practicing the cheers over and over until they reach perfection. Finally, the girls end with practice time for free-stunting. This time is used to make sure that all the stunts are "game ready". The stunt groups also get the opportunity to learn new stunts. These stunts give the girls the opportunity to progress as a squad. Senior Captain, Christine Ronnebaum, said, "I love stunting because we work so hard to get our stunts." Before the girls leave practice, former cheerleader and coach Jama Linkel discusses upcoming events.

Not only do the cheerleaders work hard, but they are also at risk for injuries. Stunting is one of the biggest dangers for a cheerleader. One danger is that the flyer could fall from a stunt. This year alone, Batesville had three flyers fall and get hurt. The bases are also at risk. If the flyer falls on top of them, they could break something. Tumbling poses the threat of broken backs and sprained wrists and ankles. There are also some less obvious risks. Because the girls are together so much, sickness poses a problem. When one girl gets a cold, it is very likely that most of the squad will get it.

While working together, these girls build a special bond. They are together from June until the middle of March, cheering for both football and basketball. They practice regularly two days a week and have at least one game per week. Being together this often is one of sophomore Elizabeth Roell's favorite aspects of the sport. She said, "I love going to all the games and hanging out with everyone. We are a mini family." Kelsey Macke, another sophomore, said that one of her favorite parts was "all of the friends I have made and how well all of us get along. We have so much fun." Jama Linkel said that the girls this year, as a whole, get along better than most of her previous squads. She said, "This group does the best at keeping the squad together and keeping their personal opinions out of it for the sake of the squad."

Ronnebaum said that she loves the dedication of the girls. She said, "No matter what, we are always there." The varsity squad cheers at all of the varsity football and varsity men's basketball games. The JV squad cheers at home freshmen and JV football games, along with JV basketball games. They also assist the varsity squad. All cheerleaders attend special events. During basketball, they attended the sectional and regional t-shirt signings and pep rallies.

Cheerleading creates memories each girl will hold on to for the rest of her life. Macke said, "I know that when I graduate high school, cheerleading will be the one thing that I remember everything about." Whether these girls remember practices, particular games, or the friendships they made, they can always look back at the great times they had while cheering for Batesville High School.

HEATED PRACTICE

You hear the "Whoosh" of the ball machine shooting tennis balls. You hear the knock of the ball and the racquet. It's a dry, sunny summer day and the sun is at its highest peak in the sky. You wonder, "Who would want to practice on a day like this?"

Henry Luchow states, "Practice was difficult at times but sometimes easy."

The men's tennis team had fantastic season with a record of 19-5. A key moment was in the E.I.A.C. when they got first place with a 5-0 record. They won conference, sectional, and regional, but in semi-state they loss to Indianapolis Brebeuf in the first round. The tennis team has won conference a all-EIAC winners were Joe Fortkamp and Reece Rose. Coach Jack Froman said, "Everyone played hard, and they all had winning records."

Creating doubles teams was a struggle this year. Two players both have to work hard, and they both have to get along. In the end, the two doubles teams were comprised of Billy Romweber and Mitchell Taylor and Reece Rose and Joe Fortkamp. These teams gave them the winning points in both matches at regional.

The team is losing some good seniors, but they gained a lot of well-rounded freshman this year. They hope to see some good junior high players. Let's hope the tennis team keeps practicing hard for a good season next year.

Round One

Run! Sweat suits! Run! Conditioning! Practice! Run! This is nothing more than a normal routine for a wrestler at Batesville High School.

As a wrestler, it's important to remain in a certain weight class. For some, such as sophomore Anthony Gartenman, it takes wrapping up in sweat shirts and a sweat suit during practice to hit the certain weight. This is why it takes commitment to be on the team, and according to Coach Bill Starose, "Our wrestlers are dedicated to the team."

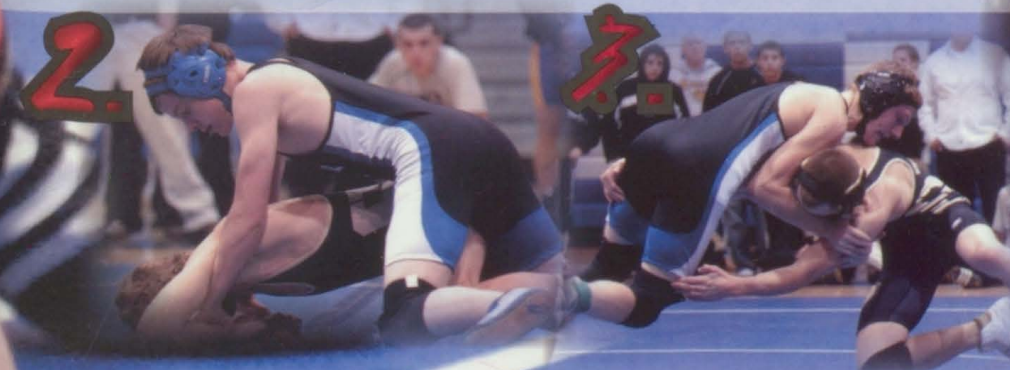

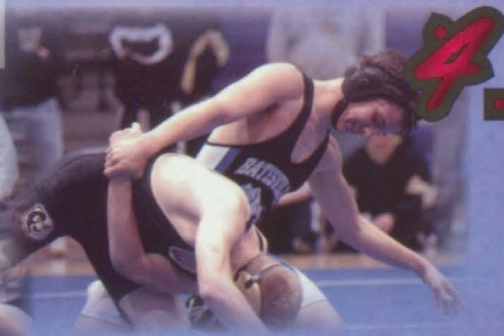

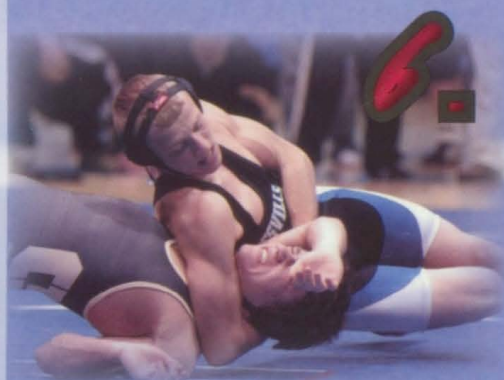

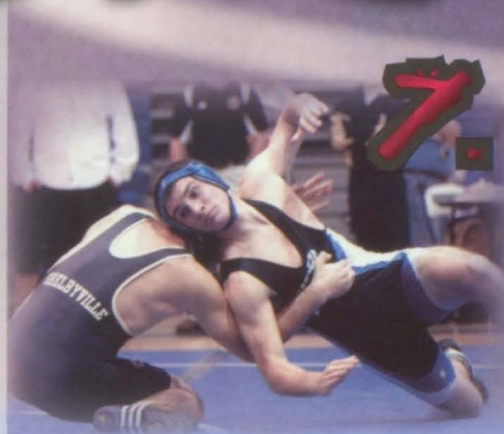

This dedication proved to take the team deep into the season. Starose said, "Batesville wrestling was 14-5 in dual meets this year. We advanced eight to regional's and three to semi-state." These accomplished wrestlers included Brandon Gunter, Ben Westerfeld, Travis Nunlist, Michael Strub, Anthony Gartenman, Matthew Linkel, Daniel Howard, and Kevin Kruezman. For three the journey didn't stop there. Nunlist, Gunter, and Westerfeld advanced to semi-state, where they were defeated. According to sophomore Daniel Howard, "The season was pretty sweet, plain and simple."

According to sophomore Howard, "The season was pretty sweet, plain and simple." This to be successful. which proved be the team was the dual meet, which the team hasn't won in several years." There was a lot of enthusiasm around the mat for Kruezman's match.

The wrestlers lived up to their expectations this season, and the future is looking bright for the wrestling squad. Howard said, "The team has a lot of promise for the future with many underclassmen wrestlers who produced this year; they will be back and ready." Starose said Ben Westerfeld was the wrestler with the most promise, and Matthew Linkel was the most-improved wrestler. The team does have a few goals for next season, however. "As a whole we need to improve on our instinctive wrestling," Starose said.

Regional wrestler Gartenman said, "The season was pretty sweet, plain and simple. I'm the best there is." Gartenman will be a key leader next year for the team as multiple seniors graduate.

The Batesville wrestling team took their skills to the mat and didn't disappoint their fans. They sent multiple wrestlers deep into the postseason and gave the community a season to look forward to in the 2011-2012 school year.

Working Up a Sweat

Being committed to the team and consistent in your game are two factors that are important in any sport, but the 2011 women's tennis team thinks these are just some of the key skills they have that help them rock the tennis court. This team was progressive in many ways, particularly by using analyzing skills.

"I think identifying our weaknesses is definitely helpful, it helps to realize what we can do to work around it or to get our strength to shine through it," said junior Samantha Flodder.

"I know that my weakness is my back hand, so I try to practice my back hand as much as possible at practice," said Flodder. From learning their strengths and weaknesses to the Dairy Cottage trips, the girls were working the courts to their advantage.

Ending the season with a record of 10-2, the team was defeated to sectionals. However, by OA and did not advance on they were E.I.A.C. champs.

"I believe being in good condition for tennis is good. Most people don't realize tennis is a rigorous sport. You never know how long a match will last," said senior Molly White. From jump ropes to ladders lifting, these girls were not said senior Molly White. and running to weight-messing around when it came to staying ready for a game.

The girls all agreed the key skills are important to know, but the girls also agreed on another thing. Oldenburg Academy's tennis team was hard to beat.

"OA, they are talented players, even though I hate to admit it, and they have played since they were children," said White.

"We tried our hardest against them," said sophomore Ellen Heppner. Since the girls knew what to do to improve their game, they had no problem accepting defeat and made frequent trips going to Dairy Cottage or Dairy Queen for some treats.

"All the bus rides and our trips to Dairy Cottage were the most memorable part of tennis, it made us feel like family," said Heppner.

Despite the short season, the girls developed several skills that will help them strengthen their game and lead them to future goals on the court. Next year's competitors are going to have their work cut out for them.

Won by a Hair

JR steps over the birdie putt with a chance to win. JR takes his stance and takes his practice putts. He has the break in mind and the tempo in his swing. JR takes his back swing, gives it a little tappy, and it's good! Here comes the hat flip, and now his hair is exposed. The mystery begins.

Josh Rhoads, more formally known as JR, is a fun-loving kind of guy. There is one mystery that surrounds this dynamic person. JR's mullet or as he refers to it, the "rat tail."

So what's the mystery behind the hair? According to Rhoads, "I have it because my brother died and he had one." According to Rhoads he keeps his "rat tail" in honor of his brother who died when he was little.

According to freshman Dominique Shildknecht, "I think his hair makes him who he is because his personality is goofy, and his hair matches it."

According to Rhoads however, "Teammates have asked me to cut it, but I told them they have to win sectionals before I will cut it. Otherwise, if we don't win, it's going to be there."

As for the team, the coaching. Jason Walke and at the start of the year and by several wins and freshman freshmen consisting of Domi-Logan Schwering, Ben Kick, contributed to the chemistry of with a record of 35 and 17. The finished second in the conference

The team had four "All Conference" players that included Rhoads, Ben Luchow, Grant Meyers, and Thomas Hatcher.

After bad storms forced the golf sectionals to be moved from Greensburgh Country Club to North Branch, the team made the trip looking for a sectional title. The dogs came up short however shooting a 342 as a team and missing third place by five strokes which would have sent them off to regionals.

The team's senior captain however moved on to regionals as an individual. Rhoads shot an 82. Overall, for such a young group of players, the team had a promising season, and a more promising future.

The team will have eight players returning, five of which took part in the varsity matches. Rhoads however will be the only graduating senior on the team.

"I'm going to miss golf team. It's basically been my life for the past four years at Batesville High School," said Rhoads.

"My favorite memory from golf team was winning the playoffs at Ripley County tourney my junior year, but shooting 33 at North Branch is a tie," said Rhoads.

Two of Josh's teammates for three years of high school golf, Isaac Fullenkamp and Connor Hagan commented on what their favorite memories of JR were.

Fullenkamp commented, "I love JR. He is my best friend. He makes me giggle. As for the course, my baby nine [iron] was his biggest nemesis."

Hagan said, "My favorite memories of JR was when JR five-putted, and a tear gently fell from his face. It was bad for JR, but funny for everyone else. My other favorite memory was when JR almost fell in a creek and the team had to pull him out."

JR had some advice for next year, lower your mistakes, have good course management, and have fun."

The team had a good season, with a young team. As for JR, his golf days at BHS are over, but he will be taking his talents to Trine University. His hair and antics will follow him to Angola where he will be next year.

Teammates have asked me to cut it, but I told them they have to win sectionals.

You hear the cheering screams of the crowd. As your head bobs back under water, the cries become muffled. Your arms propel your body forward. Your head rises back into the air and the vocal embrace of the blue and white crowd. This is the experience of a Batesville swimmer.

Swimming demands one to be in peak physical shape. Practices include weight training, core strength, and swimming 3,000-5,000 yards daily. The team practices at the Greensburg YMCA. Once the meets begin the team reduces the practice days to three times a week instead of five. The regular season begins at the end of October and ends in mid-February.

The men's swim team record ended at 31-10. The boys had seven individual records and three relay records broken. Bryce Timonera broke six of the seven with Scott Gryspeerdtd breaking the seventh. The relay teams included Timonera, Gryspeerdtd, Thomas Hatcher, and Matt Weiler for two of the three. The third record-breaking team included Timonera, Hatcher, Weiler, and Aaron Cox. The boys' defeated Connersville and Centerville for the first time ever, showing big schools talent coming their way.

The women's 27-17. The women broke and one relay record. three individual records the third. The relay team Emily Kelley, and Haley for the girls was that they the first time ever on EC's swim team end record was three individual records Andi Cox broke two of the and Erin Hankel broke included Cox, Hankel, Hall. An exciting moment defeated East Central for senior night.

Both swim teams have swimmers who improved. The women had three swimmers come to the program with little swimming experience. These three were Clare Parker, Emily Rozman, and Sam Brandt. They all earned their varsity letter and were big contributors in the pool and in the classroom. Brandt said, "I never swam competitively before and thought it would be fun and easy, but it turned out to be difficult. I hated the practices at first, but as the year went on started to like it more and more." The swimmers who improved a great amount on the boys' side were Graham Hunter and Jacob Hawkins. Timonera said, "Scott Gryspeerdtd improved because he was a bit more motivated as a senior."

Both teams are losing valuable seniors. Gryspeerdtd and Reece Rose are leaving the men's team but a huge freshmen group will help fill up those holes. Hall, Hankel, and Kelley are leaving the girls, so they will have some holes to fill next year, as well.

Both teams finished well in the EIAC. The men came in second with EIAC champions being Scott Gryspeerdtd and Bryce Timonera. The girls came in second as well with champions being Hankel and Kelley.

At sectionals the women placed seventh and the men placed fifth. The individual champion was Bryce Timonera increasing onto regional's to go all the way to state.

Coach TJ Greene said, "One of the best memories was the way our fans follow the team. BHS has one of the best following in sports."

Senior Fawn Ryan runs down the court to make the easy lay up and is fouled from behind. Her two free throws could possibly be the deciding factor for the Ripley County Tournament Championship game against South Ripley. She shoots and sinks her shots. Her free throws helped win the game for the dogs.

Both Ryan and Junior Maddie Lambert said beating South Ripley in the Ripley County Tourney was the season's highlight and best memory. Lambert, who has viewed South Ripley as her rival since fourth grade basketball, said, "That was the first time I ever beat South Ripley in my entire life!" The varsity coach Matt Maple also relished in the victory and said, "It was sweet because no one expected us to win."

Winning the Ripley County Tourney was one of Maple's goals as the new varsity coach on the women's coaching staff. The new coaching staff brought big changes to the program. Ryan said she liked the new coaching staff even though the team worked a lot harder than they had in her previous three years of basketball. Lambert concurred and said with the new coaching, "everyone on the team improved."

The difficult practices often with laughter. Lambert was reprimanded for smiling by to run a serious hard-working remembering he said, "Don't be how confusing and comical his thoroughly confused at the time, paradoxical statement. It has coach and team.

The strong bond between hopeful on the bus rides to the games. Laughing, Ryan remembers singing childhood songs with Lambert and Lanning all the way to dinner before the game. Some of their favorite tunes to sing included the "ABC's," "The Itsy Bitsy Spider," and "The Star Spangled Banner." Singing always put the girls into a fit of laughter that almost always brought them to tears. The girls were still laughing so hard from their songs that a waiter asked if she was alright because of her tears.

The tough loss at sectionals ended the season earlier than the coaches and players hoped. Lambert, a key player to the team's defense, blew out her knee shortly after the game began. After losing to Franklin County earlier in the season the girls' wanted to prove themselves at sectionals. Fighting hard the entire game, the girls came close with the score 66 to 60, leaving their season record 12-8. The Lady Dogs also placed third in the EIAC with a record of 4-4. Their losses came to Franklin County and East Central two each. Games against Franklin County were not as close as those against East Central. Away at East Central the Lady Dogs fought hard into overtime losing by just one point. Lanning commented on the game and said, "it was intense." Within conference Ryan was voted all-conference and only lost conference MVP by one vote.

Both Lambert and Lanning plan on returning next season as seniors to lead the team in fun and focus. As for next season, Maple wants to work more on shooting, ball handling, and basic fundamentals in practice. This season he was very satisfied with the girls' rebounding. The girls' out-rebounded their opponents 30 to 16 rebounds per game. He hopes to keep their strong rebounding skills up and continue to establish his expectations as the new varsity coach.

RUNNING ON TRACKS

On a hot summer day, you look outside and see a pack of runners go by your house. You smell the hot asphalt and hear the clot, clot of shoes hitting the ground. You feel the sweat running down your forehead.

This is just one of the things cross country does for practice. Most of the runners enjoy running in a group rather than by themselves. The coaches let the runners decide where they want to run. The choices are running through town, on the course, or on the track. They run a grueling 3-6 miles every day at practice. James Call said, "Practices are fun, but a little challenging, some are quick, but others may be long."

Cross Country is a sport that requires teamwork. If one person improves speed, they gain the team more points. Scoring for cross country is very unique. They add the placing of the top seven runners for that team, the team with the lowest score wins the meet.

Coach Leo Turchyn said, "Both teams try hard to do their best each season." Both the cross country season this year.

The women's had a great season with With Steacy Gryspeerdt scoring, they went on to girl tried their hardest, beat their own personal challenging team was because they have some in state. South Dearborn was the team with closest scoring.

The boys' cross country team had a winning season with 74-46. Many of the guys think they could have done better. Some beat their personal record, but many came close. Hayden Merkel led the team and came in third for regionals. Collin Koury was another leading member of the team, especially since he made All-Conference. The team had trouble, lost to South Dearborn, which stopped them from winning conference. In regionals, Columbus North gave them the most trouble in the team and individual runs. Call stated, "We did well, considering we lost some top runners due to injuries."

Win or lose, both cross country teams performed as a pack and tried to win as many meets as they could. Next year's team hopefully can keep this up. Koury said, "We a losing a lot of seniors, but should be getting some good junior high runners. Let's keep this pack with a winning record."

To this year's staff,

What a year!! All of you were new to the staff this year leaving Ms. Cunningham and I to teach you everything you needed to know, not to mention there were only nine of us to get the entire book finished. Each of you stepped up, and after a first semester of learning everything you needed to do to get the book finished, we did it!

Emily and Madeline- You two picked up a slack that I couldn't always do. I'm sorry I panned so much on you two when I was busy with other stuff. You two were always up for correction or doing spreads. Without you two, I'm not sure everything would have gotten done.

Daniel- I'm going to be honest with you, I had no clue who you were or how you were going to be when you walked in on the first day. But Skip, you proved me wrong. Your writing techniques improved greatly from the first story I read of yours. Also, you were often granted the monotonous job of naming the team pictures, but you always came through.

Tiff- You were stuck with writing many stories this year, and your writing improved greatly as well. Also, your senior personality tallying was invaluable.

Justin and Suzy Q- WOW! You two did great on the ad sales! Your job is very important to the staff because without you two there is no way we could operate.

Nate- You introduced us to so many new songs this year it's hard to remember them all. But besides the music, we had so many laughs from the constant jokes that we had in the back row.

Continued from page 154..... Thanks for the laughter and fun this year.

Trevor- Our camaraderie, if you will, began with the many backyard baseball games when you used to live in Lake of the Woods. This camaraderie was renewed this year when you first walked into the room on day one. The fun we had this year is invaluable and will be remembered for a while. The trips outside of the classroom with Nate rank up with some of my favorite memories in high school. I will miss the constant laughter and fun you provided to the class this year. Good luck in everything you do.

Ms. Cunningham-Where should I start. First off, thanks for always being there when I needed someone to talk to. Furthermore, I know we sometimes had disagreements on some issues, but we were always able to work them out, and in the end, I know I was right. I'm sorry I wasn't always able to pull my weight outside of class, but I'm glad you were understanding and delegated the duties to others. We had a rookie group, but between the both of us, we whipped them into shape and got them ready to meet the challenge.

Thanks Again, Grant

Justin Edwards
